President Completes Rough Draft Of Message

Truman to Deliver His Anti-Inflation Plan in Person to Congress Tuesday

By The Associated Press

President Truman virtually completed work yesterday on the rough draft of his anti-inflation message to Congress, which convenes at noon today.

He returned to Washington in the afternoon from a weekend cruise on the Potomac River with his principal aides and top speech writers.

The President will appear personally at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday before the Republican-controlled Congress he has described as the "worst," save one, in United States history. From this Congress he apparently will ask authority to control prices on meat and other key commodities, certain rationing powers, completion by the House of action on the Senate-passed long-range housing bill, enactment of his civil rights program, etc.

Some of the President's close advisers said he probably would not ask for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act at the extra session. The legislation was passed over his veto and there is little prospect of getting the same Congress to take it off the law books.

Little Hope for UMT

Another measure President Truman long has advocated—universal training—also likely will be sidetracked.

The question of raising the basic minimum wage level is one of the subjects he is expected to touch upon, along with anti-inflation measures. The American Federation of Labor yesterday called for raising the present minimum wage from 40 cents to $1 an hour.

The CIO has called for an immediate minimum of 75 cents an hour, with increases by labor-management committees up to $1 an hour. President Truman has indorsed the 75-cent figure.

Senator J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, suggested meanwhile that if the Republican Party wants to back up some of its pledges it should do something about the wage level.

"Has a Republican tried living on $16 a week in the Republican inflation?" he asked in a statement.

Brushed Aside "Recklessly"

The President called Congress back in the expressed hope of getting enacted some legislation which he says was brushed aside recklessly when the lawmakers quit to attend the presidential nominating conventions which named Gov. Thomas E. Dewey the Republican candidate and Mr. Tru-

29 Killed When Airliner Crashes On Canadian Peak

Rimouski, Quebec, July 25 (AP).—Twenty-nine persons were killed Saturday night when an airliner struck a Gaspe Peninsula mountaintop 195 miles east of here, and burned.

It was one of the worst crashes in the history of Canadian aviation. The plane, a Dakota, was the property of Rimouski Airlines.

The accident occurred while the plane was making a 50-mile flight across the Gulf of St. Lawrence from Fort Meunier on Anticosti Island, to the town of Gaspe. The plane struck near Grande Greve, about 12 miles away.

Ground parties reached the scene today. They were able to identify only the bodies of the pilot, Emerson E. Mills, and the copilot, Ross Miles.

An airlines pilot here said Miss Odette Quellet of Bic, Quebec, daughter of Wilfred Quellet, a vice president of Rimouski Airlines, was known to have been aboard.

The other passengers were said to be lumberjacks coming home from the Anticosti woods for a holiday.

Washington Army Officer Weds Daughter of Kurusu

Two gay Japanese prints hang in the living room of Mrs. Marion W. Maddox, 4230 Fessenden st. nw. And there is a reason.

Maddox

Yesterday, her eldest son, William Johnston Maddox, jr., 27, who once studied to be a newspaperman, took as his bride Jaye Kurusu, also 27, daughter of Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese "peace" envoy to Washington at the time of the Pearl Harbor bombing.

The handsome Washington man, now an Army lieutenant attached to the military government, placed a wedding band purchased in Washington on the finger of his bride in Episcopal services at Karuizawa. Civil ceremonies were held Saturday in Yokohama.

Said Maddox's mother, a petite, gray-haired woman who has two other children:

"I am personally very pleased."

Mrs. Maddox, said she'd received letters and gifts from the girl.

The bride, whose sister, Pia, 22, was married last August 14 to Lieut. Frank White, now a civilian employe of the Army, was educated in Europe and speaks five languages. Maddox, a native of Newburgh, N. Y., was graduated from Wilson High School here, attended American University for a year and later studied journalism at Michigan State College at Lansing.

He went overseas as a first lieutenant in December, 1940. Maddox has a sister, Mrs. Richard Oswald, of New York City, and a brother, Notley Maddox, 23, who is attending the Univeristy of Oklahoma.

Dixie Senators Set to Block Racial Bills

Southerners Willing To Take Blame for Tieing Up Congress

By the United Press

Southern Democratic Senators, willing to take the blame for tieing up the special session of Congress, unlimbered yesterday for what may be a foolproof filibuster to bar passage of racial rights bills.

Republican leaders are ready to call up President Truman's racial rights proposals as the first order of business in the Senate. They have two reasons: to widen the political breach between the Administration and the Southern Democrats, and to saddle the Democrats with blame for blocking special session legislation.

The Southerners' system is known as "amending the journal." At the beginning of each new legislative day, the journal of the previous day's proceedings comes up for approval. Senate rules provide that it must be gotten out of the way before any other business can come up.

Usually the journal is "dispensed with" by unanimous consent. But if someone wants to prevent certain legislation from coming up, he can demand that it be read in full, and then start amending it. There is no bar to the number or nature of amendments and debate on each amendment is unlimited.

About the only way to circumvent this "journal" talk-trap, according to parliamentary pundits, is for someone—presumably the GOP—to call up a civil rights bill before the Southerners get a chance to get going on the journal.

Once a motion is made to call up a bill, the Republicans can recess instead of adjourn the Senate each day until it is acted on. Most experts maintain that the journal does not have to be acted on unless the preceding "legislative day" is ended by adjournment.

Mrs. Patterson Family Rites Here Tuesday

Private Funeral To Be Held at Dupont Circle Home

Private family funeral services for Mrs. Eleanor Medill (Cissy) Patterson, editor and publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, will be held here at an unspecified hour Tuesday.

Burial services, also private, will be conducted Wednesday at the family funeral plot in Graceland Cemetery, Chicago, it was announced.

Washington services will be at the Patterson mansion, temporary White House during Coolidge's Administration, at 15 Dupont Circle. The Rev. Dr. Dudley E. Stark, of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church of Chicago, will officiate.

Messages of condolence reported received yesterday by the family included communications from Herbert Bayard Swope, industrialist and onetime editor of the New York World; Arthur Krock, New York Times Washington correspondent; William Randolph Hearst, publisher, and Bernard M. Baruch.

D. C. Home Rulers Put on Show For Progressives

By a Post Reporter

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 25.—The Progressive Party convention saw here today a vociferous demonstration in favor of full suffrage and home rule for the citizens of tthe District of Columbia.

The demonstration was led by the D. C. delegation carrying banners reading, "Wallace and Taylor will end our plight: D. C. home rule is your fight."

The Progressive Party platform as recommended to the convention, and as it probably will be accepted here, reads:

"We call for home rule and the granting of full suffrage to the disenfranchised citizens of the District of Columbia."

Mrs. Gertrude Evans, vice chairman of the D. C. Progressive Party, spoke in favor of the plank.

Fall Downtrend Possible

Living Costs to Soar Higher, Government Expert Believes

By the United Press

The cost of living will go still higher late this summer, Ewan Clague, the Government's top price expert, said yesterday. But he thinks there may be a slight downtrend by fall and winter.

Clague, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, set forth his views in his bureau's monthly review to be published today.

He said food prices, which make up 40 per cent of the Government's monthly cost-of-living index, are due to keep rising into September. That is a usual seasonal trend, he added, and the rise in meat prices will be "an important influence."

"This means that during the summer months of 1948 the food index would normally rise. Since food has a heavier weight than any other group in the index this would—other factors being equal—tend to carry the whole index upward."

Clague said the average "cost of the market basket" for moderate income families in big cities is now about 70 per cent higher than in the 1935-39 period. The bureau prices only 200 of them regularly but they are so representative they accurately reflect the over-all change.

While he expects a higher cost of living, his aides also expect wages and average weekly earnings to set new records.

A Bureau of Labor Statistics report said New York bricklayers were making $3.20 an hour on July 1, as wage rates for union workers in the building trades reached an all-time high.

Bricklayers in Newark, N. J., drew $3.15 an hour and in Phoenix, Ariz., $3. The average wage for their work throughout the country was $2.67, compared to $2.10 for all types of construction workers.

The department said that between July 1, 1947, and July 1 of this year, wage contract negotiations resulted in a 10 per cent increase for all trades combined. The annual gain in the two previous years was 15 per cent.

Wallaceites Reject Move Against Reds

Motion Defeated To Declare Party Does Not Indorse Russian Policies

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, July 25.—The Progressive Party today elected its permanent officers and adopted its 1948 platform, after defeating a bitter but one-sided floor drive to declare in its platform the party does not give "blanket indorsement to the foreign policies of any other nation."

The party's first convention, at which it nominated Henry Wallace for President and Senator Glen Taylor for Vice President, then was adjourned at 8:12 p. m. (EDT).

Permanent Officers

Chairman, Elmer A. Benson, Farmer-Laborite former Governor and former Senator from Minnesota.

Co-chairman, Paul Robeson, Negro baritone, and Albert Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers, CIO.

Secretary and campaign manager: C. B. (Beanie) Baldwin.

Treasurer, Clark Foreman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Vice chairman, Mrs. Eleanor Gimbel of New York, Fred W. Stover of Iowa and Alvin Jones.

Adoption of the platform, which calls for negotiation with Russia, repudiation of the Marshall Plan, and repeal of the draft, among its many planks, came after some five hours of debate and speeches.

Vainly Fitzgerald, permanent chairman of the convention, called for the referral of all amendments to the national committee.

When the showdown came on a question of whether the convention would go on record as not indorsing the policies of the Soviet Union only a few scattered votes throughout the hall were heard in favor of it.

The proposed amendment, snowed under by vociferous opponents, would have said in effect that while the Progressive Party was critical of the foreign policies of the United States, it did not indorse all those of Russia.

The convention did adopt an amendment to the platform's peace plank saying it is the "joint responsibility" of Russia and the United States to end the menace of war. The amendment said this country has grater responsibility for peace than Russia "because it has vastly greater power for war."

Other Amendments

Besides beating down the mild plank designed to keep the party from implied indorsement of Soviet Russia's foreign policy, the convention amended its platform to:

1. Eliminate a demand for a unified homeland for the Macedonians.

2. Indorse the idea of a world government and a world federal legislature.

3. Call upon the Arab peoples and the Jews to resist British and American imperialism.

4. Demand preservation of rights of conscientious objectors and restoration of civil rights to conscientious objectors who have been penalized.

5. Indorse establishment of a de-

Finns, Czechs To Get Share Of Aid Funds

Two Neighbors of Russia Included In Plans to Help Western Germany

By The Associated Press

American money will be spent with two Soviet neighbors—Finland and Czechoslovakia—to help get western Germany back on its feet, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Economic Cooperation Administration, announcing a new $18,902,479 foreign-aid spending authorization, said the two countries will share in it.

Czechoslovakia will receive $400,000 for repairing freight cars for the United States-British zones of Germany. Finland will receive $488,000 for ground wood pulp to be sent to the same zone.

This is the first time that procurement authorizations have been approved for these countries, ECA officials said. They said the action was in line with the desire of ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman to encourage west-east European trade within the limits set by Congress. Congress wrote safeguards into the Marshall Plan designed to prevent war materials being shipped to countries behind the Russian "iron curtain."

Nine foreign nations, including Mexico, Brazil and Uruguay in the western hemisphere, will receive $13,725,000, or roughly 72 per cent, of the money earmarked for the new purchases. The remaining $5,177,373 is to be spent in the United States. The authorized purchases include wood pulp, hides, metals, machinery, equipment, foodstuffs and services.

The total authorization is for $19,545,478, which includes shipping charges of $643,000. It covers the past week and is the lowest announced for any week since ECA has gotten fully under way. It is also far under the weekly 100 million dollars average, which has included loans as well as grants. Officials attributed the comparatively small amount to a lag in getting the July-September quarterly program under way.

Grain, Hay Outlook Good in Europe

Europe seems likely to harvest the best grain and hay crops in 1948 since the war, the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations reported yesterday.

"But even with good crops, hunger in Europe will not be over," the FAO added in summarizing reports on prospects.

"The population of Europe (west of the Soviet frontiers) has increased since prewar by 13 millions. Food consumption per person in Europe has generally been seriously below prewar, not only in total calories but also in the most desirable foods, meats, dairy and poultry products, and oils and fats."

The U. N. agency said that Europe may buy less food from the United States and Canada in the next three years than it has in recent years, and more from other countries.

Dallas, July 25 (AP).—Ten Texas Congressmen, including House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn, were assured of renomination in returns to the Texas Election Bureau tonight.

The Democratic nomination in Texas is equivalent to election.

Former Gov. Coke Stevenson, 60, and Representative Lyndon Johnson, 39, will meet in an August 28 second primary for the United States senatorial nomination. They seek the job held by W. Lee O'Daniel, who did not run.

Gov. Beauford Jester was renominated without a runoff.

Rayburn won over two opponents who had criticized him as not speaking up for State's rights at the recent Democratic National Convention. He said he would leave for Washington and the special session of Congress Monday. He was named to his nineteenth nomination from the Fourth Texas District.

Both Johnson and Stevenson planned to go to Washington for the special session of Congress. Stevenson will observe Congress and Johnson will take his seat in the House.

The bureau's 8 p. m. (CST) tabulation gave Stevenson 398,845 votes, Johnson 331,637, and George Peddy, Houston attorney, 196,033.

Sophoulis Sponsored by U. S.

King Paul Refuses to Accept Prime Minister's Resignation

Athens, Greece, July 25 (U.P.).—King Paul tonight refused to accept the resignation of American-sponsored Premier Themistocles Sophoulis and goverment leaders went into conference seeking a solution to the cabinet crisis.

The political upset came as the Greek army prepared to make "important changes" in subordinate military commands.

Reliable sources said Sophoulis wanted to resign because members of his own Liberal party had attacked his controlled-price wheat policy.

The premier took his resignation to the royal palace tonight. After its rejection by the king, Sophoulis met Foreign Minister Constantin Tsaldaris and former vice premier Sophocles Venizelos at his suburban home.

It was reported Sophoulis demanded an immediate recess of parliament as a condition for continuing in office.

Sophoulis is scheduled to confer with United States Ambassador Henry Grady.

Later in the day, Grady is scheduled to attend a meeting of the supreme defense council at which the army reorganization is to be worked out. Details of the scheduled changes were not announced.

Sophoulis became Prime Minister September 7, 1947, when guerilla warfare was at its height and after four different governments had collapsed in the period following the 1946 general election. At the time it was reported

Hoffman Asks Europe for 4-Year Plan

Seeks Speedy Action And Collaboration For Full Recovery

By Walter Kerr

Paris, July 25 (NYHT)—Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation administrator, called for action here today from the countries receiving Marshall Plan aid and asked for a four-year "master plan" aimed at the full recovery of Europe by 1952.

At his first meeting with the foreign ministers or finance ministers of the participating states, he laid down a program of collaboration which he expected them to carry out and he urged them to readjust their economic lives to the requirements of a new and changing world. He wanted:

1. A four-year plan for every nation, for western Germany and Trieste, with annual programs so that progress could be measured each year.

2. A four-year master plan that would be a composite of the individual plans, and again with annual targets to test the effectiveness of the effort.

Savings and Loan Firms Set 4-Year Solvency Record

The Federal Government has not been called upon to aid any insured savings and loan association in more than four years.

This information came yesterday from William H. Husband, general manager of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Established in 1934, it insures the savings individuals have in savings and loan and home finance organizations.

Although favorable business conditions of course have helped the associations, Husband said, he explained they also have built up their reserves.

"Since 1941," he added "they have increased their combined reserves from 181 million dollars to 585 million dollars, a rate substantially above the rate of rise in their total assets."

Revolt Flares In Soviet Area Of Germany

Anti-Russians Clash With SED; Military Courts Sentence 21

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—German and Soviet press reports today drew a picture of political unrest in the Russian occupation zone which at some places has broken into open violence.

A spreading revolt by the surviving non-Communist parties against the policies of the Russian-sponsored, Communist-controlled Socialist Unity Party (SED) was indicated.

So outspoken has this opposition become that a new wave of arrests is reported to have been launched against non-Communist leaders.

The Russian official press acknowledged unrest and violence. It reported the sentencing by a Russian military court of 21 alleged German "terrorists," accused of attacks upon "democratic organizations" in the Soviet zone. These included bombings of political party headquarters and other physical attacks.

The non-Communist press here said these attacks were made upon Socialist Unity Party members and their headquarters.

The American military government's official German language newspaper, Neue Zeitung, said numerous Liberal Democratic officials are being arrested in Saxony and Thuringia, where they are opposing the Communists' new two-year economic plan.

There was new evidence the Russians may postpone local elections due this fall.

The Soviet official press published a petition from a second newly authorized political party, the National Democrats, asking a one-year postponement of these elections.

The British-licensed German press service was broken up by groups of Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats.

The Post Poll

Most Area Residents Favor Firm Policy Toward Russia

Policies of the United States toward Russia are all right as they are, or ought to be tougher, most area residents believe, according to The Washington Post Poll.

Present handling of Russian relations is approved outright by 32 per cent. An additional 5 per cent approve with qualifications.

The great majority of those who disapprove—36 per cent—are dissatisfied because the policy of the American Government is not sufficiently firm. Twenty-three per cent cannot make up their minds on the question.

Four per cent refused to answer these questions on Russia because they felt it was not safe to discuss the matter.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Local residents were asked:

There has been a lot in the papers about getting along with Russia. Do you approve or disapprove of the way our Government is handling relations with Russia?

Replies were as follows:

	All Groups	Educational Level: Grade	High	College
Approves	32%	25%	33%	35%
Approves in general, but disapproves of some things	5	1	3	11
Disapproves	36	34	37	38
Undecided	23	33	23	14
Refused to answer	4	7	4	2
	100%	100%	100%	100%

Asked the reasons for their opinion, those who approve of the way the Government is handling relations with Russia, said:

Total Who Approve: 32% of total.

U. S. Experts Map Next Crisis Move In Berlin

New Conference Of Big 4 Ministers Seems Certain To Be in Offing

By Wes Gallagher

Berlin, July 25 (AP).—America's top advisers on Russia and Germany met in this blockaded city tonight to map new moves in the Berlin crisis which seemed certain to result in a new Big Four conference.

Reports which could not be confirmed by official sources said President Truman, together with the chiefs of state for Britain and France, were planning a direct approach to Prime Minister Stalin.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor for Germany, who just returned from Washington, indicated there had been a shift in the United States position on the Berlin issue bringing it into line with the British and French positions.

He said the United States is prepared to negotiate on "all of Germany," but "not under duress." By duress he referred to the Russian land blockade of Berlin. In their first note to Russia, the Western powers expressed willingness to negotiate on Berlin only.

Following today's meeting of top-rank American diplomats from Washington, Moscow and London, Clay told a press conference:

1. The United States has "expressed nothing but willingness to participate in discussions on German problems, but not under duress."

2. That he thought the Russians had not committed themselves so far that they could not lift the Berlin land blockade.

3. That Allied planes will continue to fly supplies to Berlin "no matter what happens in the (air) corridors."

4. That the United States would start construction work on a new Berlin airport tomorrow morning.

Clay indicated the West might be willing to discuss a new proposal on currency, if necessary, in order to reach an agreement on breaking the Berlin blockade. The Russians sealed off their zone to prevent a flood of worthless marks from swamping eastern Germany when the West introduced a currency reform in their zones. The United States official said the Western Allies always have been willing to discuss the currency reform with the Russians.

Clay said today's conference was "to exchange views and present a united front in all diplomatic negotiations."

After the conference, which lasted more than two hours, Ambassa-

British Open Push In Malaya After Raid by Spitfires

Singapore, Straits Settlement, July 25 (U.P.).—Hundreds of heavily equipped British troops moved against Communist-led guerilla bands in a 45-mile-square area near Kuala Lumpur just before dawn today, dispatches from Semenyeh said.

The latest offensive followed a raid on the area, 21 miles southeast of Kuala Lumpur, the Malayan capital, by Spitfires.

As the drive got under way scores of people living in the target area were arrested.

Singapore police reported that a rubber estate official was roasted alive and five other persons were killed in widespread guerilla raids during the past 24 hours.

Red Coup Military, Czech Officer Says

New York, July 25 (AP).—A high Czech military leader who escaped from Czechoslovakia, says military rather than political reasons motivated the Russian coup in his country, the New York Times reported today.

The officer, Gen. Frantichek Moravec, chief of intelligence and deputy chief of staff in the Czech army during World War II, declined to speculate about what possible use Russia would make of its strategic position in Czechoslovakia.

Sir Benegal Rama Rau Arrives to Take His Post as New Ambassador From India

Sir Benegal Rama Rau, a short, affable, British-accented gentleman, arrived here yesterday to be the new Indian Ambassador.

He was interviewed in the handsome embassy at 2700 Macomb st. nw., after arriving in Washington by plane from London via New York.

It was his first visit to the United States, but he described himself as well-disposed toward Americans based on an impression gathered in Bombay and Tokyo.

In Bombay, as chairman of the port trust from 1941 to 1947, he was in charge of incoming supplies for American and British troops. In Tokyo for the past year, he represented India as head of a liaison mission to the occupation government.

His position there meant "8 or 10 parties a week," and he hopes the Washington pace will not be quite so fast. He describes Tokyo as a "miniature Washington."

Sir Rama Rau and his daughter, Miss Santha Rama Rau, a Wellesley College graduate, author and magazine writer, were greeted at the airport by State Department representatives, including Elbert G. Matthews, chief of South Asian affairs; Joseph S. Sparks, Indian desk officer, and Edward Nash of the protocol division, as well as members of the Indian Embassy staff and representatives of the British Commonwealth nations.

The Indian welcoming group was headed by Ratan K. Nehru, minister, who has been in charge since the previous ambassadors, Asaf Ali, returned to India to become the governor of the province of Orissa. Pakistan was represented by M. O. A. Baig, counsellor of embassy.

Though Miss Rama Rau wore the traditional Hindu sari dress, and several turbans were in the welcoming group, Sir Rama Rau had on a gray Occidental business suit. More traveled than his predecessor and more used to Western ways, he said he found Western dress "more comfortable" and would wear the knee-length "achkan," or tunic, only on formal occasions.

The new ambassador, who is 58, has been in the Higher Administrative services for India since he was graduated from King's College, Cambridge, in 1913. He majored in economics, and by 1928 he was financial adviser to the Simon Commission.

He was successfully Deputy High Commissioner and acting High Commissioner for India in London, and High Commissioner in South Africa. For three years, he had been adviser to the Indian delegation to the round-table conferences leading to the Parliament's India bill in 1934 and the Indian constitution the following year.

Lady Rama Rau, who plans to join the new Ambassador in a few days, is arriving by boat, accompanied by three Indian servants. A graduate of the University of Madras, Lady Rama Rau has been a leader in Indian women's activities all her life.

A second daughter, who is married and resides in Bombay, is expected to join the family later for a visit.

New Jet Fighters, Bombers Revealed at Soviet Air Show

By Thomas P. Whitney

Moscow, July 25 (AP).—Several new jet fighter planes and bombers were unveiled by Russia today at the annual Soviet air show.

Prime Minister Stalin watched as the military section of the air display, commanded from aloft by his son, Maj. Gen. Vassily Stalin, passed over Tushino Airport.

American military observers present said they considered that the most important feature of the show was the uncovering of the new jet fighters and bombers.

[Walter Cronkite, United Press correspondent in Moscow called it the greatest parade of air power in Russia's history. Cronkite said observers agreed the Russian jet planes appeared to equal the best they saw anywhere and that there were more jet planes than at last year's show.]

(A Moscow Radio broadcast heard in London said some of the jet fighters in the show approached the speed of sound. Sound travels at about 760 miles an hour at sea level and with a temperature of 59 degrees Fahrenheit. At higher altitudes it moves more slowly.)

Bombers a Feature

One feature of the show was a flight over the field by a sample of the Soviet long range bomber force—15 four-engined bombers. This was the same number flown over Red Square as part of the May Day parade.

American observers reported the show was a "magnificent display of training and technique and added that progress in the development of new types of planes, particularly jets, and the use of them, was "very noticeable." The whole show lasted about 1 hour and 50 minutes.

(The Moscow radio heard in London said the climax of the elaborate show was a sham air battle in which fighters drove off a swarm of "hostile" bombers.)

Following the jet acrobatics, a group of four-motored bombers flew over the fields. These were followed immediately by large flights of two-motored bombers, attack planes and four large groups of fighters, including two groups of jet fighters.

Newest Jets Show Speed

After a short wait, the newest jets which had not previously been unveiled, came over singly at long intervals. The first of these flew at terrific speed. After two of these passed the field they were followed by a brand-new jet fighter with obviously great speed, then another new plane, and, finally, the fastest of all, a new jet of which two were shown.

The speed of these latest planes apparently indicates that the Soviets are determined to maintain priority in jet development and high speed aviation.

A large delegation from the Moscow diplomatic corps watched the aerial display from a special section.

The show opened with a large flight of planes piloted by aviators of the Society for the Assistance of the Soviet Air Force flying in formation so as to spell the words "Glory to Stalin."

Two new types of gliders were shown in an exhibition of formation flying and acrobatics.

A new helicopter type craft called a "Vertolet" also was shown. It lands in a space 3 yards square.

One of the finest exhibitions of the show was the performance given by hero of the Soviet Union Savitski. He led five jet planes at top speed through complicated acrobatics with perfect timing.

U. S. Experts Meet in Berlin To Map Next Moves in Crisis

dor Lewis Douglas from London, Ambassador W. Bedell Smith from Moscow, and Charles Bohlen, the State Department's Russian expert, left for the British capital.

(Douglas, Smith and Bohlen arrived at London at 5:08 (EST) today and left immediately for their residences. Plans for conferences in the British capital will not be completed until tomorrow, an embassy spokesman said.)

The United States, Britain and France appeared to have agreed on accepting the Soviet demand for a new conference on all of Germany. If the French are prepared to act, there were indications that new western power action should be ready for presentation by mid-week.

There was no optimism, however, that such a conference would solve the problem. There was a possibility that Smith might be authorized to act on his return to Moscow.

Clay said the conference was held in Berlin because of his illness. He is suffering from a lame back and neck which make it difficult for him to move.

Clay said he had discussed in Washington all phases of the Berlin situation and he and Bohlen had filled in Smith and Douglas on the official attitude in Washington.

Asked if there had been any discussion of measures that might be taken should the Russians try to interfere with the air lift operation to Berlin, Clay replied:

"The planes will continue to fly no matter what happens in the corridors."

He revealed that additional C-54's will start arriving in Germany from the United States shortly with the aim of increasing the lift capacity to over 4000 tons daily.

"This will make it possible for us to fill Berlin's minimum needs for many months to come," Clay said.

Asked whether the United States or other Western Powers were considering other than diplomatic measures to break the Soviet hold on Berlin, Clay replied: "All diplomatic measures must be exhausted first."

Clay said he found united agreement in Washington on the necessity of staying in Berlin and a determination to do so although leaving the way open for negotiation.

He said orders had been issued to start construction of a new Berlin airport tomorrow morning to increase the air lift operation. It will be situated in the French sector of the city but will be built by the United States with German help.

Clay said Douglas had come over from London instead of awaiting the arrival of Bohlen and Smith to clear up some points which he will present later to the British government.

The U. S. military governor said he is more optimistic about the Berlin situation since his trip to Washington because of receiving added air lift which will give the west valuable time for preparing its next moves.

Rumors about a Big Four conference also were circulated in London today. It was reported there that the Western nations, rebuffed by Russia on their first protest against the blockade, were thinking of making a direct appeal to Stalin. One responsible spokesman said:

"There might be a lot of methods suggested, but at this stage we are still talking about it."

The Russian-controled National Zietung said Ambassador Smith was on a "secret mission" believed to involve a direct approach to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov. The newspaper suggested that if new four-power talks materialize they may be held "not in London, but in Berlin or even Frankfurt."

16 U. S. Jets In Germany; 75 More Due

Fuerstefeldbruck, Germany, July 25 (AP).—Sixteen United States jet fighter planes roared into Germany today, completing a 5060-mile flight from Selfridge, Mich., in only 12 hours and 10 minutes actual flying time. They were fully equipped.

The detachment was led by Lieut. Col. D. S. Schilling of Kansas City, Mo., United States Air Force ace in World War II. The planes sat down at this former Nazi air base for several weeks of training.

The last leg of the journey, from Odiham, England, was a 600-mile jaunt negotiate din an hour and 20 minutes.

Another 75 jet fighters will be shipped here from the United States soon, said Col. Malcolm Stewart, base commander. He aims to take care of an average of 82 jet fighters and some B-29 bombers.

The base was opened to German newsmen and photographers for the propaganda effect on the German population.

Latin America Exports Hit

London, July 25 (AP).—Britain will not import any wheat from Argentina this year and probably not even next year, authoritative sources said today. They added that new import cuts, now under cabinet consideration, will also affect imports from Latin America.

According to the influential weekly, the Economist, expansion in Australian grain production would reduce future imports from South America generally.

Government officials listed four main factors as responsible for hampering trade development with Latin America:

1. Insistence on payments in United States dollars.
2. Excessively high prices, of which Argentina was particularly accused.
3. Lack of adequate distributing channels.
4. Insufficient absorption by Latin America of British goods.

British quarters said Latin America seems to prefer United States equipment for industry and development.

28-Day Score Of Berlin Lift Is 65,000 Tons

Berlin, July 25 (U.P.).—American and British transport pilots flew 9794 planes into blockaded Berlin in the first 28 days of "operation vittles" and proved it is possible to supply by air alone a city the size of Boston.

The Americans estimate their operations costs $20,000 a day, not counting the cost of the food itself or the salaries of Army personnel. That's a total of about $5,600,000 so far. The British estimate they have spent $1,462,215, again not counting the cost of food.

Pilots and their planes have been ordered to Germany from such distant points as Alaska, Panama and Australia. They have flown 4,557,802 miles in the supply operation, carrying 65,077 tons, equivalent of about 180 freight trainloads of food, coal and other goods for western Berlin's 2,400,000 people.

The operation began June 26.

Plane Crash Laid to Plot

Macao, July 25 (AP).—A plot to kidnap four millionaire passengers may have been responsible for the crash of an airliner with 25 deaths, the police commissioner of this Portuguese colony declared today.

One of the victims carried a huge sum of cash, he said.

The Cathay Pacific's Line's flying boat, en route from Macao to the nearby British colony of Hong Kong, crashed into the sea 4 miles from Macao July 16. Seven of the dead were Americans.

Police Commissioner L. A. M. Paletti declined to identify the millionaires, but he said:

"We have a few small indications pointing to piracy. When we raise the rest of the wreckage we may find more evidence to confront one suspect we already are holding."

25,000 Lions Clubbers Converge on New York

New York, July 25 (AP).—The vanguard of an estimated 25,000 delegates and guests converged on New York today, on the eve of the thirty-first Lions' international convention. The convention is scheduled to open Monday at Madison Square Garden. Monday night the Lions will stage a three-hour parade on 5th ave.

Racial Strife Laid to Reds

By the United Press

The American Jewish League Against Communism yesterday accused the United States Communist Party of setting one racial group against another by "subtle incitation, propaganda and occasionally violence."

The league's executive director, Rabbi Benjamin Schultz, delivered to the White House a letter asking President Truman to appoint a commission to investigate Communist-inspired "racial tension."

The league cited incidents in New York, Detroit and Los Angeles to back up its charge that much of the tension was fostered deliberately by the Communist Party to divide the people and "soften America for the revolutionary moment and for international Communist aggression."

It said the Red racial action was headed by Henry Winston, secretary of the National Negro Commission of the Communist Party; Alexander Bittleman, general secretary of the Jewish Commission, and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, chairman of the party's Women's Commission.

Their action, it said, has taken two forms: to inflame the discontent and grievances of each minority group, while claiming that the Communist Party is that group's only friend, and to set one racial group against another.

Cabinet Reshuffled in May

Sophoulis reshuffled his cabinet last May but the current cabinet rift hinged on the controlled price of wheat. Nine of 48 liberal Parliament members demanded the price be raised and threatened to join the opposition if no action was taken.

Sophoulis expressed extreme annoyance at the trouble within his own party ranks. He considered it the "last straw" in two weeks of parliamentary unrest.

A military court at Yannina sentenced 9 women and 38 men to death for aiding Communist guerillas. Ten persons received life sentences and two were acquitted.

Globe-Girdling B-29s Complete Libya Hop

Tripoli, Libya, July 25 (AP).—Three B-29s on a globe-circling flight landed at Wheelus Field here today, completing a hop from Lagens air base in the Azores. The next leg of the flight is to the Aden Protectorate.

The three Superfortresses left Davis-Monthan base at Tucson, Ariz., early Thursday. They are making a two-week test of flying facilities around the world.

Hoffman Asks 4-Year Plan ran a little counter to the conservative views of Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, who pointed to the difficulties ahead, the need to move cautiously and the inadvisibility of exaggerated hopes. But the American spokesman came back to defend his planning program and to urge imagination in its execution.

"If the people are once inspired," he said, "the results may surprise you."

Others present approved this approach, including Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgian foreign minister, and the out-going and in-coming finance minister of France, Rene Meyer and Paul Reynaud. Sean McBride, foreign minister of Eire, recommended the ministers meet at least once every month or six weeks. Once again Sir Stafford was inclined to shy away, but he suggested and the others agreed to meet whenever Spaak, as president of the OEEC thought it necessary.

Expects Pledge to Be Kept

Hoffman told the ministers the American people expected the European nations to carry out their pledge, which he summarized as follows: "The promise of joint action and collective use of your capacities and potentialities; the responsibility of each nation to develop an inclusive program in the fields of sound government finance, of production and of trade; and the terminal date" (June 30, 1952).

For Europe to become again "a living, workable and independent economic and political organization," he said, old ways of doing business and old concepts had to be changed.

"I want to make clear as crystal the fact that what I have in mind is a program of action, not a rigid and ponderous five-year plan which tries to compress the life processes of a nation into a set of formulas and a sheaf of statistical tablets. Surely for freedom-loving peoples no plan must ever lose sight of the creative force of individual human beings and of the extent to which a nation of free men renews itself from unknown and unsuspected sources of strength in the minds and spirits of its men and women."

Hoffman will begin bilateral discussions with the individual delegations Monday.

Red Press Assails Tito as a Fascist

Moscow, July 25.—Pravda, Communist Party newspaper, published a report today from its representative in Belgrade abandoning Premier Marshal Tito and his followers once and for all to the enemy camp.

In the absence of an official Soviet party rereresentative, the special representative of Pravda handed down a judgment of the Yugoslav Communist Party Congress. The judgment was published not only by Pravda but all the other leading Moscow papers, therby enhancing its significance and importance.

(The Congress today voted complete and unanimous approval of Marshall Tito and the party's central committee.)

It amounted to an announcement that Marshal Tito and the group presently controlling the Yugoslav party have reached "the last borderline" separating them from Communists of the Soviet Union.

Until now there has been some hope that Marshal Tito would recant, see the light and return to the fold of the mother party. He has been burning one bridge after another, however, so that now, as the result of his stand at the Belgrade Congress, Marshal Tito is considered beyond repair.

From today, he is declared to be no longer a Communist, but a Fascist. He is compared to the late Jacques Doriot, French pro-Nazi, and Benito Mussolini.

Pravda's observer complained bitterly about the use of "dictatorial methods" and force which Marshal Tito and Gen. Alexander Rankovich, Interior Minister, were using to maintain control of the Yugoslav party. Pravda was shocked that such methods should be used by Communists.

Again Pravda protested against dictatorial police methods, threats, violence, repression, mass arrests and persecution.

Pravda reported the building in which the Bedgrade Congress is meeting was surrounded by troops and antiaircraft guns on all sides, and that planes were held in readiness. It said these were intended to force delegates to vote blindly for everything "dictated to them by the dictatorial leadership of the Yugoslav Communist Party."

[The Associated Press reported that youth organizations of Cominform countries have been advised to sever all relations with the youth organization of Yugoslavia and to disband the Balkan Youth Council.

[Announcement of this action came at the Fifth Congress of the Yugoslav Communist Party. The congress today condemned Pravda, for "slanderous reporting of its meeting, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said.]

Tito Reported Ready To Trade With U. S.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 25 (AP).—Culbert L. Olson, former Governor of California, said tonight Marshal Tito told him Yugoslavia is willing to maintain trade relations with the United States, providing there were no political ties.

Olson interviewed Tito for an hour. He said he was here on a "strictly personal trip" and expects to leave tomorrow for Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Tito told the Californian he was confident the Yugoslavs were right in the current split between the Cominform and the Yugoslav Communist Party.

Paris Cabinet Is Reported Completed

By James McGlincy
United Press Staff Correspondent

Paris, Monday, July 26 (U.P.).—Premier Andre Marie has formed a 19-man right-of-center coalition cabinet including all large parties but the Communists, informed sources said today.

The new cabinet will include at least three former premiers, it was said. Robert Schuman, whose government resigned last Monday, will replace the veteran Georges Bidault as foreign minister. Bidault, like Schuman, a member of the powerful Popular Republican Movement (MRP), will become vice-premier.

Elder Statesman Leon Blum, whose support of Marie finally won the backing of his Socialist Party, also will be named vice premier, the informants said.

Blum defended Marie's choice of Paul Reynaud as minister of finance before a meeting of Socialist Party leaders last night and won their reluctant acceptance. Reynaud, a member of the right-of-center Independent Republicans, is one of the nation's outstanding financial experts.

Formation of the new cabinet followed weeklong negotiations between Marie, a radical Socialist, and leaders of all political parties excepting the Communists. Much of the opposition came from the MRP, which was reluctant to accept Bidault's removal from the foreign minister's post, and the Socialists, who balked at Reynaud as minister of finance.

Chinese Get Loyang Back

Nanking, July 25 (AP).—Pro-Government dispatches credited the Chinese government today with recapture of Loyang and indicated some easing of the Communist siege of Taiyuan.

Loyang, a key base in central China was taken by the Communists last spring.

The Chinese airforce lifted its ban on use of the Taiyuan north airfield by civilian planes. The Chennault Civil Air Transport Line immediately resumed shuttle flights to that beleaguered capital of Shansi Province.

The government reports acknowledged that an entire division had disappeared after abandoning Hsinhsien, 40 miles north of Taiyuan. It was implied the division may have gone over to the Communists.

Budapest, Hungary, July 25 (U.P.).—The government yesterday announced that agreements covering Russia's July 1 reduction in Hungary's reparations had been signed.

The reduction, which altogether averages 50 per cent, cuts steel goods deliveries by 75 per cent and agricultural deliveries by 84 per cent.

Navy's Largest Plane Arrives From Coast

92-TON PLANE—The Navy's largest airplane—the Lockheed Constitution—landed yesterday at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station after a 2600- mile flight from Moffett Field, Calif.

Giant Navy Plane Flies From Calif.

By The Associated Press

Patuxent River Naval Air Station, Md., July 25.—The Navy's largest airplane, the 92-ton Lockheed Constitution, landed here at 5:47 (EST) today after a 2600-mile flight from Moffett Field, Calif.

The average speed was about 260 miles per hour. Tailwinds ranging from 20 to 50 miles helped push the 168-passenger giant across the country. The plane took off from the Naval Air Station at Moffett Field at 7:28 a. m. (EST).

It was the first time the Constitution had landed outside of California, although it has made about 150 test flights.

The plane is the largest ever to visit the East and is exceeded in size only by the Air Force's B-36 and its cargo version, the C-99, which weigh about 136 tons.

Comdr. William M. Collins was at the controls, although the ship has not yet been turned over to the Navy. Roy Wimmer, engineering test pilot for Lockheed, flew as copilot.

They reported the weather excellent except for thunderstorms between Omaha and Chicago, which put them off their planned course. The flight was made at about 20,000 feet with the cabin pressurized.

The plane flew over Washington National Airport and Andrews Air Base, where a model plane contest was being held.

Approaching Patuxent from the west, the plane made one low pass over the northwest-southeast runway for the benefit of photographers, and then made a five-minute circle before landing.

The plane left Moffett with a full gross load of 184,000 pounds. A crew of 12 Lockheed representatives and 22 Navy officers was aboard. In addition the plane carried spare parts.

Wimmer said that the plane had 7750 gallons of gasoline aboard at takeoff and used about 5200 gallons. The ship was flown with only about half of its 14,000 horsepower.

The plane will be flown to Washington later in the week for exhibition, then to New York, before being returned to California for more flight testing.

The Constitution flown here is one of two of this type built for the Navy at a total cost of around 27 million dollars.

6 British Jets At Base Here

Six Royal Air Force Vampire fighter planes, which recently became the first jets to fly the Atlantic, arrived at Andrews Air Force Base at 2:32 p. m. yesterday.

It was the first stop in the United States for the planes. After an official welcoming ceremony at 10:30 a. m. today, they will give an aerial display before leaving for Greenville, S. C., to participate in Ninth Air Force maneuvers there.

The joint maneuvers are part of the United States-British program for exchange of training and experience.

The six jets are accompanied by three Mosquitos and three York transports. The total complement is approximately 70 officers and men led by Wing Commander D. S. Wilson MacDonald.

The planes flew to Andrews Field from Trenton, Ontario, Canada, a distance of about 375 miles, in approximately 105 minutes. They have a maximum operational speed of 535 miles per hour, according to Thomas Cochrane of the British Air Ministry, who accompanied the planes from London, "but took it gently."

The Vampires took off from Odiham Aerodrome, England, their home base on July 1 and flew to the Hebrides. From there they hopped the Atlantic via Greenland and Goose Bay, Labrador, to Canada.

Post Reporter Gets Big Kick (Gastric) Out of Spin in Jet

By John W. Brigham
Post Reporter

The city editor sings out, "Who wants to take a ride in a jet plane?"

Before you know what you're saying you yell, "I do."

Brigham

That's how you find out how a bullet at work must feel about it all.

After that, you can take the roller coaster at Glen Echo or leave it alone.

Just so you won't feel too concerned about your heirs while climbing almost vertically toward the Pearly Gates at around 10 miles a minute, they give you a $25,000 life insurance policy. After it's all over, you'd be willing to put up $1000 a minute, if you had it lying around, for the fun of the ride all over again.

The propellorless, slightly oversized cigar that does this to you is Lockheed's brand-new TF-80C Shooting Star trainer, first two-place jet, demonstrated for the Air Force the other day at Andrews Field. One hundred and fifty-six of them have been ordered so the boys can learn to handle jets with an experienced man along with them in the air.

Except that it's three feet longer, the jet trainer is exactly the same as the 16 jet fighters that flew the Atlantic recently in 280 minutes and the 75 now en route to Germany aboard the aircraft carrier Sicily.

If you've ever been strapped into an electric chair, you'll probably feel right at home when the warden—pardon, the attendant—tucks you and your crash helmet into the glistening little tube of supermobile artillery behind Tony LeVier. Tony is Lockheed's chief engineering test pilot, and he's nursed this jet trainer job along since its first burp in March. You're right behind Tony. Later on, you wish you wern't so darn far behind him. You can't throw your arms around the nurse's neck. For comfort, that is.

Then they clamp the little mouthpiece of the intercom over your kisser. You can't scream. Just as you're figuring out a few well-chosen last words the plexiglas canopy comes down, the telephone says, "All set?" and, baby, you're off.

One minute you're streaking along about 2000 feet of runway like a bat out of hell. The next you're at a half-reclining angle watching the world drop rapidly out of sight. Then you're playing hide and seek with Zeus and Aries and the gang on Mount Olympus. Can that moisture that's forming under the plexiglas be their tears for your immortal soul?

Now you're out of the clouds and half way to Richmond. Lush countryside peeps up from wa-a-ay down there. Snatches of it are all you see as Tony lets Old Jato out to something like 600 miles on hour plus. Six hundred—count 'em, mister. Of course, light does a trifle better—186,330 miles per second. Sound travels pretty fast, too—1090 feet a second. But the first newspaper copyreader in the world to fly in a jet—so they say—can thumb his nose at Johnny Cobb's paltry 569.7 mph. auto speed record, can't he?

Maybe your stomach hasn't yet misbehaved. Tony's cheery voice comes back, "Would you like to see how she takes an aileron roll" What else can you say but "Sure"? The earth starts to disappear as the plane rolls over. You grab the bottom of your seat firmly with both hands. Suddenly you're looking down at clouds whirling past you faster than you ever noticed before.

Just about there your attention is diverted internally. There seems to be some sort of uprising in the abdomen. Your left ear doesn't feel too good. Tony is talking but you can't make it out. After some years things get straightened out again. If you're scared only half to death, it's probably because you don't know any better. Stupid, some call it. Tony inquires politely if you'd like to see how well a jet controls in a stall. You say, "Go right ahead." The air speed indicator drops to 500, 400, 300, 200, 100. Then you're just sitting there in space, nice and quiet-like. Tony reaches both hands over his head. No hands. And you—no stomach again.

Even dragging along at a 5 or 6 miles a minute, Tony starts his approach to the field from 7 miles away. You side-slip most of the way in. Your thoughts are right back on the roller coaster at Glen Echo. You wonder if you dare tell the city editor that ancient one about swooshing past the corn and bean fields so fast it looked like succotash.

Harbor 'Blast' Excites N. Y.

New York, July 25 (AP).—A pilot's report of a "tremendous explosion" aboard a 100-foot vessel sent Coast Guard and police boats and planes scurrying over Lower New York Bay today in a fruitless rescue mission.

After approximately an hour the boats and planes returned to their bases without sighting wreckage, flaming debris or oil slicks.

The Coast Guard dispatched two vessels and a plane while New York police sent three launches and a plane out into the bay after Edward Binder reported he saw an explosion aboard the boat in Raritan Bay and that afterward the vessel disappeared.

Binder, manager of an airport, said he saw the explosion while on a flight to rendezvous with a motor cruiser in Raritan Bay.

He placed the explosion as having occurred about 10 miles from Perth Amboy, N. J.

Seizure of Haifa Refineries Hailed as Victory for Jews

Haifa, Israel, July 25 (AP).—Fritz Bernstein, Israel's Minister of Commerce and Industry, says he regards reopening of the Haifa oil refineries by the Jews as a great victory, parallel to military victory.

Bernstein said the Jews had seized the Haifa refineries, owned by the Anglo-American and Shell companies, "to insure necessary supplies for Israel and to battle against oil sanctions."

(Britain has protested the seizure. A British Foreign Office spokesman in London said the Jewish action might prejudice British efforts to restore the flow of crude oil from the Kirkuk, Iraqi, fields through Haifa to western Europe.)

The Commerce Minister said Shell and other companies are distributing the refined oil to the Israeli government and other consumers at prewar prices.

Truce to End Soon, Arab Official Holds

Cairo, July 25 (AP).—The Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram quoted Syrian Premier Jamil Mardam Bey today as saying the United Nations-imposed truce in Palestine is a temporary one and "much shorter than most people believe."

The same newspaper also quoted Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha, secretary general of the Arab League, as saying:

"This truce is just a phase in a struggle which will not end except by force. Arab countries must prepare themselves for this materially and spiritually."

Newsman Finds Greek Partisans Sure Cause Is Just

Encounters Spirit Of Evangelism; Truman Blamed

(This is the second article in Mr. Bigart's dramatic account of his trip into the rebel-held area of Greece to interview General Markos.)

By Homer Bigart

With General Markos in the Grammos Mountains, July 2 (NYHT) (Delayed).—My first few days with the partisans involved some mental readjustment. It was startling to find that they were quite ordinary flesh and blood who shaved and bathed regularly and were kind to their horses. I found them wholly convinced that their cause was right, that the regime in Athens was completely subservient to American interests and that the only way of achieving a better life for the Greek people was through a "peoples' democracy" such as in Yugoslavia.

The great majority were Communists, for the region in which I traveled is held by the hard core of ELAS veterans who had fled to the mountains when Markos called for renewed resistance. Consequently, I encountered a good deal of evangelistic spirit and frequent singing of a partisan melody that ran:

The Anglo-American imperialists
Came to our country as conquerors.
They will be beaten by the Democratic army,
As happened to the Germans.
We are not scared by Truman's guns,
Nor by Griswold's inglorious sabers.
We have written deep in our hearts
"People's democracy and an end to foreign occupation."

Traveled West a Week

For a week, we traveled westward along the razor's edge of territory the partisans hold below the Yugoslav frontier. Markos had directed I be given full security, and extraordinary measures were taken for my protection. There were never less than a dozen picked guards—self-confident lads of 18 and 19 who could travel great distances and were able to climb a 7000-foot mountain hardly pausing for rest. Generally, I was given a horse or mule, although there was a shortage of animals. All the others, including John, who had escorted me down from Belgrade and who, I guessed, was a sort of minor political commissar, were obliged to walk.

Looking at a map, the distances did not seem so great. But the terrain is so fantastically rugged that a journey must be measured in hours, not miles. Often it required seven or eight hours to traverse an airline distance of 10 miles.

Generally we paralleled the Yugoslav line, twice coming so close to frontier blockhouses that we could see soldiers running out and staring at us through field glasses. The few trails that led off into Yugoslavia showed no sign of recent use.

One night we stayed at a partisan hospital. It was a memorable night—we slept in real beds instead of on hard boards — and feasted on lamb and rice. Here I met a remarkable woman. She was Capt. Sofia Grigoriadu of Athens, commandant of the hospital, who said that in 18 months with the partisans she had performed more than 1000 operations. Her equipment was so primitive that often operations had to be done without anesthetic and with a kitchen knife. Now she had a few scalpels and a small quantity of morphia.

Hospital Hidden Away

The hospital was hidden away on a densely wooded mountain flank high above the Greek darkness of a ravine. The slope was terraced, and at various levels were four or five wooden huts that served as wards. There were perhaps 80 patients, most of them recovering from bullet wounds, and in one ward there were no beds—the men lay on blankets on the floor.

"They have great moral powers of resistance," said Captain Grigoriadu. Her patients stared at us with that docile trust of the wounded.

She walked briskly on, and at the end of the room paused at the bed of a Greek army officer who had been captured on Mount Vermion a few weeks earlier. She said he was Maj. George Melidis of Salonika. He was not wounded but was suffering from nervous exhaustion, and his eyes as she spoke were wide with apprehension. When recovered, he would be sent on to the general staff. Those were the orders—captured officers to the general staff.

The last ward was reserved for partisan women soldiers and we saw four recovering from battle wounds. Besides battle casualties, there had been some sickness among the partisans — chiefly pneumonia and recurrent malaria. The pharmacy was a shock. A little room at the end of the communal hut had a few shelves with 30 or 40 bottles. It took us back 100 years in medical history. A dressing station of our own Civil War would have been better equipped.

Captain Grigoriadu listed her most urgent needs—surgical implements, bandages, sterilizing equipment, anesthetics, penicillin, sulfa drugs, streptomycin. The only surgeon in the camp, she had on one day performed 20 operations. Her patients survived, a fact all the more astonishing from the primitiveness of sanitation.

Most of the time we traveled in daylight without slightest fear of ambush by the Greek army. For 12 days the only gunfire I heard was the remote booming of a Greek army gun which partisans said was shelling a village near Ardea. We saw few planes. The only noticeable precaution was the sending ahead of two partisans with tommy guns who scouted about 200 yards in advance.

Generally we stayed in peasant's hovels in half deserted villages, eating bitter unsalted bread and goat's cheese, with sometimes a bowl of yoghurt for dessert. When I ran out of cigarettes the partisans found ripe tobacco leaves in villages, cut them with a pocket knife and rolled cigarettes with whatever paper was available. I was deprived of the consolation of liquor until, after 10 days of intolerable thirst, a village commissar produced a bottle of ouzo.

Shown Propaganda

In one village, I was shown propaganda pamphlets dropped by the Royal Hellenic air force. One pamphlet reported that Markos lost favor in Slav capitals. Another said: "Why do you kill your brothers, burn your homes? Don't you know this is done on orders of Tito, Dimitrov and Stalin? They want to kill millions of Greeks so the Slavs can move in." Propaganda of this type seemingly was having little effect.

Col. George Caculides, regional commander, said things had been relatively quiet since the collapse on June 3 of a campaign to drive his troops from Mount Vermion. He showed me trophies of the battle, including an American 60-mm. mortar and a dozen Enfield rifles. Partisans under Lieut. Col. Dimitrios Caragopoulos had completely routed an enemy brigade, he claimed, killing 67 and wounding 130, while the partisans suffered 10 dead, 25 wounded. The average ratio of casualties was one to five in favor of the partisans, he claimed.

I have no way of checking the accuracy of this nor of the colonel's assertion that his force was four times greater now than on January 1. The new men were drawn from village volunteers and conscripts and from prisoners and deserters of the Greek army who elected to fight under the partisan banner. "All captives," he said, "are allowed to fight, set free or put to work."

He said he had enough arms, mostly of British make, and that there were now enough officers to permit one month's training for new partisans. "I think we now have a competent tactical force," he said. "There has been much improvement, especially in infiltration. In the recent action on Vermion three of our men got behind the enemy and killed seven Fascists, including a lieutenant.

Operating in support of partisan infantry along the northern frontier is a cavalry troop under Maj. Jorgas Nestorus of Siatista. It was his troops who escorted me across the only sector held by Athens troops—the 15-mile-wide valley of Phlorina that forms the southern projection of the Monastir Gap, a main route of the Nazi invasion in 1941.

Our crossing was at night under a full moon. We had come down from the snow-packed Voras Mountains and waited for dusk at a cavalry rendezvous in the foothills. Major Nestorus, a bluff, bony-faced man, wondered if I had seen any Bulgarians. This was a standard joke at my expense. Athens always talked of Bulgarians and Yugoslavs fighting with Markos and it seemed that every second partisan asked how many I had counted. Then everyone would laugh.

The major gave me his own horse and selected another mount for himself. He warned that the villages of the plain were mostly enemy-controlled. We would have to move swiftly and quietly, for this was the shortest night of the year. There were plenty of gendarmes about and it was necessary to skirt two villages. If they raised an alarm we could easily be trapped—and an armored patrol from Phlorina could cut us off in 20 minutes.

At midnight we crossed the road and dismounting for greater security, led our horses past the hostile villages. Dogs raised a furious outcry yet no one challenged us. To the north a flare was lofted, but the village guards peering nervously into the night were apparently determined to see nothing.

The western mountains gradually took shape. We entered the deep shadows of a pass. A steep ascent brought us to the ghostly ruins of a burned village. Upward we rode through high meadows and into the forest again. At dawn we hobbled our horses in a clearing and fell exhausted on the grass.

Public Housing Bill Faces Old Impasse

By the United Press

Public housing supporters plan a strong fight in the recalled Congress to force a House showdown on the disputed issue, but yesterday their chances looked no better than when Congress adjourned June 20.

As Senators and Representatives poured back for the opening of the special sesion today, key spokesmen in each chamber insisted the first step on housing should be taken by the other.

That stalemate may wipe out any chance of the hotly argued Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill being passed. The measure, twice passed by the Senate, is tied up in the House Rules Committee.

Many Republicans are saying that only a flat indorsement by GOP Presidential Nominee Thomats E. Dewey could get the T-E-W measure to the House floor for a vote.

Truman Completes Message

man the Democratic standard bearer.

Republican leaders have predicted privately they expect the session to last no longer than a month and to product little. They called the presidential summons for Congress to come back "pure politics."

The AFL's call for boosting the minimum pay level was sounded by George Meany, who is secretary-treasurer of the League for Political Education. Four other things, Meany said, also deserve prompt congressional action. He listed them:

"Effective legislation to reduce the punishing high cost of living.

"Prompt passage by the House of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner Housing bill, already passed by the Senate but bottled up in the House Rules Committee.

Repeal of Taft-Hartley Act

"Immediate repeal of the oppressive and monstrous Taft-Hartley antilabor act, which reduces wage earners of the Nation to second-class citizens.

"Prompt passage of health and medical insurance legislation urgently needed by many millions of our educational population as well as by low income families in the towns and cities . . ."

The AFL left off its list of "immediate attention" issues five things raised by President Truman in his call for the extra session.

These five, considered among the most controversial, are: Civil rights legislation, public aid to education, extension of social security coverage, funds for public power and cheap electricity, and more liberal arrangements for admission of displaced persons.

The CIO, on the other hand, last Thursday came out for all of President Truman's special session objectives.

The League of Women Shoppers, meantime, addressed a demand to congressional leaders that price control and rationing be reimposed, and that prices be rolled back to June, 1946, levels.

Congress has been called back 27 times by Presidents but only once before has it been summoned in a presidential election year. That was in 1856 when President Franklin Pierce ordered Congress back on three days' notice to pass an Army appropriation bill.

Special Session Bill For Travel Is $222,000

By the United Press

The special session of Congress starting today will cost the taxpayers more than a million miles worth of travel expenses.

Politics may impede other legislation, but passage of a $222,000 congressional travel appropriation at the new session is considered slightly surer than death and taxes. A special appropriation to provide the money will be necessary.

U. S. Churches Reach Highest Membership

New York, July 25 (AP).—Church membership in the United States has climbed to its highest mark in history—53 per cent of the Nation's population, the Christian Herald said today.

A Nation-wide survey, the magazine said, showed that the number of Americans belonging to churches increased to 77,386,186 in 1947, a gain of 3,713,006 over the previous year.

The magazine said it polled 223 Protestant and 30 non-Protestant denominations.

"Just how religious we are in spirit and in practice may be open to argument, and usually is," the magazine said. "But statistically speaking, religion in the United States is enjoying the most robust health it has ever known."

Of the total American church members, the report said, 60 per cent (or 46,149,676) are Protestants, 33 per cent (or 25,286,178) are Roman Catholics, 6 per cent (or 4,641,000) are Jewish, and the remaining 1 per cent belong to various non-Protestant groups.

In the past year the Roman Catholic church reported an increase of 866,049 members—a gain of about 3.5 per cent. Protestant churches reported adding 1,173,962 more members—an increase of about 2.6 per cent.

Newark Mobilizes Against Atom Bombs

Newark, N. J., July 25 (AP).—Newark, New Jersey's biggest city, is mobilizing against atom bomb attack.

Public Affairs Director John B. Keenan yesterday issued a call for 3500 auxiliary police and firemen, a defense organization "bigger and better" than during the last war.

"Volunteers will be given extensive training in first aid, with emphasis on the problems arising after atom bomb attacks," he said.

Archbishop of Canterbury Hails World Church Parley

London, July 25 (U.P.).—The Most Rev. Geoffrey Fisher, Archbishop of Canterbury, said today the coming international church meeting at Amsterdam, the Netherlands, may pave the way for increased understanding among the world's peoples.

Bishop Fisher broadcast from London on a Nation-wide United States network (CBS "Church of the Air"). His speech marked the opening of the six-week [illegible] Conference, a meeting of 320 Anglican bishops from throughout the world.

He said orthodox and Eastern churches, Protestant churches and independent religions all will be represented at the Amsterdam conference.

"The abiding significance of Amsterdam lies in this," he said, "that it is to inaugurate a council of churches which, please God, will continue, and will continuously draw together into fuller understanding and cooperation the divided groupings of the servants of Christ in the world."

Uruguayan Officials Here for 5-Day Visit

Dr. Alberto F. Zubiria, Uruguayan Minister of the Interior, and Congressman Juan Angel Lorenzi arrived here yesterday for a five-day visit as official guests of the United States Government.

They have been attending a conference of the International Labor Organization at San Francisco. Both were accompanied by their wives.

partment of culture, with a secretary of cabinet rank.

Vermonter Offers Plank

The attempt to amend the platform to put the Progressive Party specifically on record as not indorsing the foreign policy of the Soviet Union, was touched off by Delegate James Hayford of Vermont.

Hayford asked the convention to add this plank to its section on peace:

"While we are critical of the foreign policy of the United States it is not our intention to give blanket indorsement to the foreign policy of any other nation."

Hayford said the plank was offered without any intention of indulging in 'Red-baiting" but he said without such a plank the general impression might be given that the party was condemning the foreign policy of this nation, while supporting that of the Soviet Union.

The summer's campaign, he said, would be far more easier if this impression were specifically rejected by the convention.

De Lacey Opposes Proposal

Hugh De Lacey, former left-wing Democratic Representative from Washington, promptly rose in opposition to the amendment.

"If there is any merit in the platform at all," De Lacey declared, "it is that it comes out fighting for a firm, solid positive basis of friendship between this country and the Soviet Union."

The Vermont amendment, De Lacey declared, is the result of "pressure from outside."

Platform Committee

Chairman Rexford G. Tugwell said the committee believed the position of the Progressive Party had been made perfectly clear in an amendment approved by the committee.

The platform makers, Tugwell said, were satisfied they had not indorsed any nation's foreign policy by saying:

"Responsibility for ending the tragic prospect of war is a joint responsibility of the Soviet Union and the United States. We hope for more political liberty and economic democracy throughout the world. We believe that war between East and West will mean Fascism and death for all. We insist that peace is the prerequisite of survival.

"We believe with Henry A. Wallace that 'there is no misunderstanding or difficulty between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. which can be settled by force or fear and there is no difference which cannot be settled by peaceful hopeful negotiation. There is no American principle or public interest, and there is no Russian principle or public interest, which would have to be sacrificed to end the cold war and open up the century of peace which the century of the common man demands.'

"We denounce anti-Soviet hysteria as a mask for monopoly, militarism and reaction. We demand that a new leadership of the peace seeking people of our Nation—which has vastly greater responsibility for peace than Russia because it has vastly greater power for war—undertake in good faith and carry to an honorable conclusion, without appeasement or saber-rattling on either side, a determined effort to settle current controversies and enable men and women everywhere to look forward with confidence to the common task of building a creative and lasting peace for all the world."

Pennsylvanian Speaks Up

Then a delegate from Pennsylvania, Albert Hartunian, said:

"From reading this platform studied here, one would be perfectly justified in drawing the conclusion that we indorse the Soviet Union's policies 100 per cent."

"I do not support the Soviet Union's policies 100 per cent. I favor this amendment that we make our position clear."

The Rev. Mr. Frye of New York State, urged adoption of the amendment.

"I am in favor of peace and friendship with the Soviet Union," he said, "but not blind friendship. We are not Communists, here."

Delegate Edwin Smith of Vermont, formerly a member of the National Labor Relations Board, opposed the amendment, saying it was a compromise with Red-baiting.

When Fitzgerald put the question the few scattered votes for the amendment were drowned out by the volume of "Noes" that rocked the hall.

A last-minute committee sponsored change in the plank relating to colonial and dependent peoples which resulted in the striking out of a demand for a unified homeland for the Macedonians was made quickly today. Coincidentally, news had come from Belgrade that the Yugoslav Communist Party, in its defense against the Cominform, charged that the Macedonian minority in Bulgaria is being repressed.

Plank Overwhelmingly Adopted

However, Louis Adamic, author, a native of the Balkans, said that the decision to change the platform had been made without any advice from any foreign nation.

The plank, complete with the elimination of Macedonia, was overwhelmingly adopted.

The committee's new preamble to the peace plank, adopted without dissent, called for providing a "structure of peace through Government by making the United Nations an effective agency for co-operation among nations" and added:

"Responsibility for ending the tragic prospect of war is a joint responsibility of the Soviet Union and the United States. We hope for more political liberty and economic democracy throughout the world. We believe that war between East and West will mean Fascism and death for all. We insist that peace is the prerequisite of survival.

"We believe with Henry A. Wallace that 'there is no misunderstanding or difficulty between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. which can be settled by force or fear and there is no difference which cannot be settled by peaceful hopeful negotiation. There is no American principle or public interest, and there is no Russian principle or public interest, which would have to be sacrificed to end the cold war and open up the century of peace which the century of the common man demands.'

"We denounce anti-Soviet hysteria as a mask for monopoly, militarism and reaction. We demand that a new leadership of the peace seeking people of our Nation—which has vastly greater responsibility for peace than Russia because it has vastly greater power for war—undertake in good faith and carry to an honorable conclusion, without appeasement or saber-rattling on either side, a determined effort to settle current controversies and enable men and women everywhere to look forward with confidence to the common task of building a creative and lasting peace for all the world."

Tighe Woods Assailed

Delegates approved a demand for "removal by the President of the present national housing expediter," Tighe Woods, on grounds he is under the wing of the real estate lobby.

They approved a pledge to work for amendment of the Railway Labor Act which would permit rail workers to "enjoy the right to strike." They also called for $100 monthly retirement pensions, promised extension of price guarantees and crop insurance to all basic crops and plumped for Social Security extension to cover all agricultural workers. Also they approved a move for $35 weekly unemployment compensation and gradual elimination of excise taxes on "the basic necessities of life."

They voted to condemn military control over scientific expression and communication.

They approved a committee amendment to include the aircraft, synthetic rubber and synthetic gasoline industries among industries the party wants to nationalize.

Th convention rejected an amendment which would have called upon the President to recall his representative to the Vatican.

It also rejected an attempt to strike out a provision calling for legislation to make it a Federal crime to disseminate anti-Semitic, anti-Negro and all other propaganda by mail, radio, motion picture or other means of communication.

The session brought a quick succession of speeches.

Anna Louise Strong, California author, assailed American policy in China, underscoring demands for withdrawal of American troops from China, and an immediate stop of aid to Chiang Kai-shek.

Paul Robeson, cochairman of the Wallace-for-President Committee, told the delegates he was strongly opposed to the Marshall Plan and "the whole fabric of American imperialism."

Rogge Hits Loyalty Program

O. John Rogge, former assistant to the Attorney General who quit the Justice Department in a dispute revolving about the department's decision not to continue the sedition trials, made a blistering attack on the President's loyalty order, and on the type of charges being brought against Federal employes.

"We must take successful action in the form of this Progressive Party or we shall be saddled with fascism, American style," Rogge said.

Writer Howard Fast told the delegates he was the first of the writers, artists and scientists to be attacked by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and declared he was proud to have been a member of an organization devoted to the interest of republican Spain.

Rockwell Kent, artist and illustrator, successfully urged the convention to adopt a plank calling for a department of culture, with a secretary of Cabinet rank.

In its final minutes the convention approved a resolution protesting the slaying some months ago of George Polk, CBS correspondent in Greece. The resolution said there were "strong indications" Polk was slain by agents of the Greek government.

Youthful Followers Urged to Hold Fast

Philadelphia, July 25.—Henry A. Wallace, presidential nominee of the Progressive Party, advised 2500 cheering, stamping young people here tonight to hold fast to their present course because the events of the future will justify them.

The youths, gathered at Broadwood Hotel here, as the National Youth for Wallace Organization, had just passed a resolution demanding repeal of the draft.

In semimystical fashion Wallace, brushing back a gray lock straying over his forehead told the audience: "I say to you hold fast to your present course and you'll be surprised how fast the events of the future will be drawn toward you and validate the stand you are taking."

"Party of Future"

"Gosh, it's swell to meet with the folks who don't play it safe but who do see the long possibilities of the future," Wallace said.

It was true, he said, that the Progressive Party had a larger proportion of young people than of any other group. That was because it is the party of the future, he declared.

"I'm revelling in your spirit," Wallace told the young delegates. "It means so much to me. This mounting enthusiasm — there's something contagious about it.

"We're getting rolling now and they simply can't stop us."

The National Youth for Wallace, he declared, were the politicians of the future who believed in the integregation of science, art, labor, agriculture and business for the benefit of all.

The new Progressive Party's three-man congressional bloc, at a joint press conference today, laid down their own special session program and attacked Mr. Truman's call-back as "pure demagogy and political bluff."

The new party's "we three"—Senator Glen Taylor (Idaho), Wallace's running mate; Representative Vito Marcantonio (N. Y.), left-wing dean of the group, and Representative Leo Isacson (N.Y.)—spent most of the time attacking the "sincerity" of Democrats, Republicans and Americans for Democratic Action on civil rights.

The heavily billed "March on Washington," applauded by delegates yesterday, meanwhile was soft-pedaled.

Under questioning, Marcantonio said the Civil Rights Congress, not the Progressive Party, is organizing the August 5 march on the special session, but "many other organizations" will participate.

He said the Progressive Party was one of those. Another source said that "only a small but representative group of our delegates will be there."

The three-man joint statement said Taylor, Marcantonio and Isacson will "call the bipartisan bluff" in the special session convening tomorrow, leading off with a "genuine" attack on inflation, a fight for "houses instead of bombers" and a move to repeal the peacetime draft.

Special Session

Three courses are open to the extraordinary session of Congress beginning today. First, it could conceivably go to work on a program of major legislation, as President Truman has suggested, and remain in session as long as necessary to complete its task. Second, it could totally disregard the President's recommendations, indulge in political recriminations for a few weeks and go home. Third, it could clear up some of the most pressing unfinished business left over from the last session, consider any emergency legislation the President may suggest and then adjourn with order and dignity befitting a national legislature.

Apparently, there is no possibility that it will embark upon a major legislative program in line with the President's demand. In announcing the extraordinary session during his acceptance speech at Philadelphia the President called for action on virtually every proposal in his program that Congress has not approved. But he was obviously talking for political effect. No reasonable person would expect Congress to write into law either the Democratic or the Republican campaign pledges in a special session preceding the election. The summons back to Washington was clearly conceived in politics and many irate Republicans are apparently eager to respond in a comparable partisan manner. But that is precisely the course which would redound to Mr. Truman's political credit. Congress would be adding to the number of skeletons in its closet while aiding the President in bringing those skeletons to public attention.

In our opinion, the best course to follow is that which would best serve the public interest. There is pressing need for action on a number of proposals such as the United Nations loan, emergency housing legislation, the District home rule bill, salary increases for District employes and repeal of the union-elections provision of the Taft-Hartley Act. Let Congress dispassionately survey the unfinished business it left behind last month and weigh the President's recommendations while holding campaign oratory in check. Only such sober adherence to the legislative function will discharge the obligation of Congress and take its leaders off the spot. Congress has a chance to turn the special session to its own credit, but it cannot do so by indulging in an orgy of partisanship or by sullenly resisting all action because of the political nature of the President's maneuver.

The Silver Lining

The BLS consumers' price index reached a new high on June 15. The July 15 index will probably be even higher, since the wholesale price index is also rising, the advance for the week ended July 17 bringing it above the record level of 167 reached in 1920. A good many people may jump to the conclusion that these indices, which are a record of things past, are also a portent of what lies ahead. Recent advances in steel prices, for example, presage increases in prices of goods made by steel-consuming industries. Some recent wage increases, too, have yet to be reflected in higher prices of manufactured goods. But the cloud that obscures the price outlook has a silver lining after all.

While it would be rash to hazard a prediction, with so many adjustments to higher production costs still to be made, it is safe to say that strong forces are at work to counteract the effect of price-raising factors. The Department of Agriculture is asking farmers to cut their 1949 wheat acreage. The 1948 wheat crop will be the second largest in history, while improved crops in foreign countries are expected to reduce the drain on our supplies. Ultimately, barring unforeseen developments, more abundant crops of wheat and corn will help to bring down retail food prices, especially meat prices. The July rise in the general wholesale price level gives an erroneous picture of the price outlook for consumers. For, as the Federal Reserve Board states in its current Summary of Business Conditions, the July rise reflects "sharp increases in prices of meats and steel products. Meat and livestock prices in mid-July were about 25 per cent higher than a year ago. Prices of most other farm products and foods continued to show little change or declined in July. Cotton and grain prices were somewhat below year-ago levels." It is well to remember in this connection that retail prices reflect previous changes in wholesale prices.

Another favorable factor is the Reserve Board's June industrial production index which was close to the peacetime peak of last February and 92 per cent above the 1935-39 average. With production at such high levels, the scarcities that have helped to boost prices are gradually disappearing. That makes for lower prices. Even public clamor about rising living costs is a hopeful sign, indicating an increase in consumer resistance to exorbitant charges and a consequent reduction in the effective demand for goods at inflated price levels.

To sum up: strong market forces are now at work—influencing both the supply and demand side of the price equation—that make for lower rather than higher prices. Whether they will exert sufficient force to counteract the effect of further price increases made necessary by rising industrial production costs is anybody's guess. There is at any rate good reason to hope that the price line can be held if a fourth round of wage increases can be avoided.

Wallace Progressivism

The new Progressive Party, which has nothing but the name in common with the party of Theodore Roosevelt or that of Robert M. LaFollette, concluded its first convention yesterday with neatly disciplined tumults and shoutings. The Commies and the trustful or bewildered cranks who constitute the bulk of Mr. Wallace's following have departed, leaving the long-suffering citizens of Philadelphia free at last to give undistracted attention to the still-waxing fortunes of their precious Athletics.

The Communist minority had the convention in hand from beginning to end, and the ease and precision with which they were able to manipulate the parliamentary machinery made the lumbering steam-rollers of the Republican and Democratic conventions seem crude and anachronistic. They succeeded in organizing the party in such a way as to give themselves entire control of it. Through their comrades or through docile and obedient fellow travelers they are now in possession of all important party posts and of all important committees. The platform parrots the current party line on questions of foreign policy—repudiation of the Truman doctrine, abolition of the Marshall Plan, withdrawal of all support from reactionary governments, etc.—and on the domestic side calls for the socialization of big banks and manufactories operating under Government contracts, as well as of all utilities, railroads and merchant shipping. Thus it is harder than ever to detect any difference between Mr. Wallace's "progressive capitalism" and state socialism.

The anticipated revolt against the Communists was barely apparent and the one or two timid manifestations of it were quickly and easily suppressed. This appears to have been due to the want of any organization or coherence among the heterogeneous elements comprising the non-Communist majority and to their lack of parliamentary experience and skill. By methods not yet clear all important leaders of the Wallace movement had been brought to heel by the comrades. Mr. Wallace himself, who only a few weeks ago was imploring the Communists to get out of the party before they ruined it, said piously on the eve of his nomination that no power on earth could induce him to "indulge in red-baiting," which is the conventional term for any opposition to Communist tactics.

Whether Mr. Wallace's submissiveness went to the length of permitting the Communists to write or to edit his speech of acceptance we have no means of knowing. We do know that it contained several characteristic examples of the mesmeric logic employed by the comrades in the hypnosis of fellow travelers and neophytes, such as the passage where he asserted that millions of American lives have been needlessly and ruthlessly sacrificed to the prosecution of the cold war against Russia. It turned out that Mr. Wallace had made this startling statement on the basis of the combined mortality tables for heart disease, cancer, tuberculosis, pellagra and infantile paralysis. All these victims, he implied, would now be living if the Administration had not at the insidious urging of the military decided to get tough with Russia.

It would be comforting to suppose that Mr. Wallace has now managed to make himself so completely ridiculous in the eyes of the electorate that he has ceased to be an important factor in the campaign. But that would be one of those dangerous illusions to which Mr. Wallace is himself so susceptible. His following, apart from the Communists, is comprised of persons who like himself are capable of believing, in the teeth of all fact and logic, anything they wish to believe. And in these United States the number of such persons is much larger than bodes well for the future of free government.

Contamination

Serious charges of subversive activities on the part of U. N. delegates have been brought by subordinate officials of the visa section of the State Department testifying before a Senate subcommittee. Since Secretary Marshall denies knowledge of any such cases, the obvious conclusion is that the department has become involved in one of those unfortunate internal disputes that should have been settled by authoritative intervention instead of being threshed out in public.

The witnesses before the Senate subcommittee have in effect denounced their superiors for following policies that jeopardize the security of this Nation. And, even more serious, their charges are an affront to the United Nations that might have serious consequences. If there is any reliable evidence to support the claims that some U. N. delegates are abusing the privileges they enjoy as representatives of their countries, it should, of course, be brought to the attention of the U. N. authorities by responsible officials of the State Department for appropriate action. However, in the absence of specific complaints against particular individuals supported by well-authenticated evidence, sweeping indictments of the sort made before Senator Revercomb's committee are simply mischievous.

So long as the headquarters of the United Nations remain within our boundaries, the United States is under an obligation to admit accredited delegates from other countries, regardless of their political beliefs or their record of subversive activities in their own countries. Senator Revercomb's declaration that not even a visitor's visa should be issued to a subversive and his further assertion that "our authorities are supposed to keep Communists out of this country" would, if carried out, force the United Nations to shift headquarters to some other country less fearful of the contaminating effect of alien political philosophies. It would be ironical, indeed, if a country that takes such pride in its record for preserving rights of free speech and assembly should adopt exclusionist policies that made it impossible for a world organization to carry on business within its boundaries. Yet that would unquestionably be the result of an endeavor to extend the highly restrictive provisions of the immigration laws to U. N. delegates. It is worth noting that strict interpretation of those provisions has already wrecked plans for holding a meeting of the World Federation of Trade Unions in this country.

The United States rightly insists on a careful screening of individuals seeking entry to this country to establish permanent residence. But disbarment of undesirable aliens of this class does not warrant subjecting aliens coming here for brief periods as accredited agents of foreign powers or for other legitimate purposes to equally stringent tests. If such is to be our policy, the United States might as well be prepared for a change of U. N. headquarters to some more tolerant country—preferably to Switzerland.

The Washington Post's original choice for the U. N. site was Geneva partly because of that city's advantageous location and facilities for accommodation of delegates and partly because it was feared that American absorption in domestic issues would cause us to underrate the importance of U. N. deliberations. The misgivings expressed at that time have been revived by the current attacks on the character of U. N. delegates, which are so inimical to effective international cooperation.

The Missing Bills

One of the missing bills which President Truman failed to send to Congress last February, after it had been drafted by the Department of Justice, is probably the most significant civil rights proposal since the adoption of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments after the Civil War. It would make the right to vote easily enforceable through the Federal courts. This is only one of several bills drafted by the department to carry out the President's civil rights program and later suppressed. Its importance is such, however, that it dwarfs the anti-poll-tax bill, the antilynching bills and various other measures in which controversy over civil rights has largely centered in the past.

An existing law, as well as the Fifteenth Amendment, guarantees to United States citizens the right to vote free from discrimination on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. But that law has never been properly implemented. Nor does it cover the important steps leading up to voting, such as registration. Vast numbers of qualified voters in the South never show up at the polls because they cannot get their names on the register. To be sure, they can bring personal suits to demand their rights, as a Negro did before Judge Waring in South Carolina the other day. State officials withholding the balloting privilege on racial grounds may also be indicted, although conviction in such cases is notoriously difficult. What is now proposed is to jump over all these barriers and authorize the Attorney General to seek injunctions against every board of local registrars and every set of election officials who obstruct free voting by qualified citizens. Relief could thus be made immediate and effective. Local officials failing to obey court orders could be promptly sent to jail for contempt.

Voting for Federal officials in the primaries as well as in the general elections would be covered by these provisions. Likewise the section of the Hatch Act which makes it a crime to threaten or intimidate a person with respect to a Federal election would be extended to primaries. Further underpinning of the right to vote would come from the proposed amendments to the old civil rights statute. At present this law forbids conspiracies to deprive citizens of their rights under the Constitution. In its proposed form it would reach to even one individual acting to deprive any person of his political heritage. To make the "privileges or immunities" which no State may abridge more specific, many of them would be spelled out in another amendment to existing law.

By thus broadening the voting privilege and preventing encroachments upon it, Congress could enable the South to solve many of its own political, social and economic problems. This approach has the virtue of maintaining the Federal system unimpaired and of leaving local problems to be worked out on a local basis with all groups of citizens participating. It would impose the will of Congress on the South only to the extent of democratizing its elections, which is clearly the responsibility of Congress under the Constitution. The amazing thing is that measures of this sort should have been suppressed by the Administration, even temporarily.

Steel Wages And Prices

Why do you find it necessary so frequently to rehearse the corporation cantata that wages are the cause of inflation? Again in your July 19 editorial "Steel Wages and Prices," you take the corporation line and repeat it without inquiry or apology.

U. S. Steel Corp. increases wages and salaries by about $4.34 a ton and prices by $9.34 a ton. This is in addition to the hidden price increase it will get from the recent change in its pricing system.

Big Steel had profits before taxes of 65.5 million dollars in the first quarter of this year. Its wage and salary increase will cost about 22 millions a quarter. Did it have to pass the increase along?

It's the same store with autos. General Motors could pay its recent wage increase and still cut car prices by more than $200 if it were content to earn 10 per cent on its inflated net worth. This might not meet the magnificient ambitions of GM management, but consumers would like it.

It's the same story for corporations as a whole. They could pay a 9 per cent increase in their wages and salaries out of their present profits and still earn 56 per cent greater net income than they averaged in the lush years 1942-1946, the best years of their lives.

Don't give your readers the idea that corporations are fighting the good fight against wage increases and inflation. By taking their wage increases out of consumers, not out of profits, they have made wage increases highly profitable. The first round cost American corporations 8 billion dollars annually, and they collected 5 billion in added profits when they passed this along to their customers. The second-round figures were the same: 8 billion more wages and salaries, 5 billion tacked on top of this as an increase to their profits.

Kuomintang Tutelage

As an Englishman recently returned after a lifetime in China, I find Americans everywhere obsessed with the notion that American democratic standards alone will rid China of her Red peril. If so, how is it that the finest exemplars of democracy in western Europe are crying for American aid against the Red peril?

An eminent American, the late Wendell Willkie, returning from China, said this: "We must not expect Chinese ideas of personal liberty and democratic government to be exactly the same as before. Just as the Chinese concept of democracy differs from ours in certain respects, so does the pattern which life imposes on the Chinese leaders. The Kuomintang, the party which rules China, includes in its plan for the growth of self-government in China a tutelary stage during which the people are being educated into new habits of living and thinking designed to make them good citizens of a complete democracy, with electoral rights, at a later time."

The Chinese government, totally unlike Fascist or totalitarian governments, imposes too little and not too much government on the strongly individualist Chinese people. We must be patient with, and aid, a people who are all too slowly transferring their loyalties from themselves to their nation. Better that slow process than the regimentation of their loyalties on the Russian or the former Japanese pattern.

"Tut" Language

With no intention to cast aspersions on the recently deceased gentleman who was the subject of a news item in your issue of July 22, may I comment that the code used by him is one known as "Tut" language and used commonly by children?

The portion of the letter which you printed, in the event it has not been decoded as yet, states: "There is some cash which can be found in a tin can on top of the cabinet."

"Tut" language, if I remember correctly, consists of forming sounds for all consonants by adding "u" and repeating the consonant or some other combination of consonants. In this way "b" becomes "bub," "c" becomes "cut," "d" becomes "dud," etc. "Tut" language is usually spoken. One proceeds to spell out his words, using the sounds thus formed and saying them as rapidly as possible. The vowels usually remain as commonly spoken except for the "y" which I believe becomes "yuh."

States' Rights Issue

The Democratic convention may have seemed to many rather a sorry spectacle of the breaking up of a famous old party. But, if it served no other purpose, at least it reminded us of the great basic principles on which this country was founded.

For the Southern Democrats, achieving real stature in their hour of defeat, had this to say—that the 13 colonies entered the Union to protect themselves on their right to local self-government and in their right to be free from the heavy hand of an imposed outside authority. The founders never envisioned what a hydraheaded monster their own central government would become under the leadership of unprincipled ambitious men taking advantage of a national emergency.

No amount of tinseled window dressing nor frantic eleventh hour beating of the breast at the plight of the common man (whose vote is their chief concern) can obscure the fact that once again both major parties have failed to present the country with the real issue, which is the issue of constitutional government versus statism.

For 16 long years the American people have been waiting for a man with vision and patriotism to lead them back to the broad free highway where there is room enough for them to march side by side.

Compulsory Health Insurance

This writer would like to answer the letter of Dr. James G. Bennett (July 17) who regards my letter (July 1) as "slanted, distorted and containing very little that aids the general public or the medical profession in understanding the problem of dispensing medical services to all."

Simply stated, Dr. Bennett champions full-coverage compulsory national health insurance. He claims the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill "somewhat modified" provides competent medical service by qualified doctors who will be guaranteed fair remuneration for their services. This writer dissents.

The qualifying phrase "somewhat modified" intrigues me. Apparently reference is made to prospective expedients now included in the shopworn bill which will be unveiled when Congress reconvenes.

It is this characteristic attitude of utter contempt for majority will which occasioned this present exchange of letters to the editor. The Physicians Forum which Dr. Bennett champions is a group of 1000 doctors out of the approximately 160,000 which constitute the totality of the Nation's qualified physicians. These 1000 doctors have labored as a political lobby for various and sundry remodelings of compulsory insurance.

The subtle hint that there has been a repaint job on the long-unsold compulsory health bill may explain why Dr. Bennett of West Virginia undertook the tactical strategy of diverting attention from the propaganda activities of Dr. Ernest P. Boas of New York.

Theoretically this would accomplish two missions: My original letter accused Dr. Boas of being habitual front-man of political lobby determined to impose compulsory health insurance upon an overwhelming majority of American doctors who do not want it. Had Dr. Boas answered my letter subsequent events (somewhat modified) would prove my charge that there is direct liaison between the Physicians Forum and the White House.

Instead of the 130,000 organized doctors of the allegedly reactionary American Medical Association advising the White House on an American health security insurance plan, Dr. Boas et al are doing it. This shows how much the White House actually values collective bargaining by dominant majorities of organized workers.

Though Dr. Bennett subtly implies the soon-to-be announced face-lifted compulsory health bill has been "somewhat modified" it still persists in imposing the impractical and unwanted. Reference is made to the retention of multiple choice methods of paying participating doctors for services rendered. According to Dr. Bennett payment will follow three options: straight salary, per capita of patients or fee-for-service.

The British Compulsory Health plan provides the only properly controlled and administered experiment available for comparative clinical study. Their sad experience is an impressive indictment of the desirability of the first two options. British doctors by overwhelming majorities refused to cooperate with the new health plan until Health Minister Aneurin Bevin provided guarantees that they would not become salaried servants of the state. Our British brothers accepted capitation (panel system) as the lesser evil. They frankly admitted that the per capita method of paying doctors would overwork the doctor and cheat the patient.

This only leaves the fee-for-service method of paying participating doctors. British experiences gives an illuminating commentary on adapting that alternative to a compulsory health insurance system. In a plebiscite 25,842 British doctors out of Britain's 40,462 qualified doctors refused to participate in the compulsory health plan except on a fee-for-service basis. The dominant Labor government frankly admitted it could not be done. Does the "somewhat modified" compulsory health plan Dr. Bennett describes propose a solvent method of doing it?

The Lost Cosmos

FROM THE LEAGUE TO U. N., by Gilbert Murray, O. M., D. C. L., Litt. D., LL.D. (Oxford University Press, $4.50.)

Professor Murray has always seemed to me a necessary and wholesome counterpoise to the infatuates who say that the plays and poems attributed to Shakespeare are really the work of the Earl of Oxford or Lord Bacon or some other high-born contemporary. The principal impression I have had from reading Professor Murray's translations from the Greek is that the tragedies of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides could have been written by none other than the Bard of Avon himself. That, however, has nothing to do with the present book, which is a collection of lectures on one aspect or another of world affairs given by the professor at various times since 1934. It is distinguished from most collections of the sort by the ease and urbanity of the language, by a kind of genial earnestness, by occasional glints of humor and by literary and historical allusions drawn from the professor's rich and catholic learning. Professor Murray is one of those who have sought to combine vocation of the scholar and the avocation of the public man. He was for some years a prominent figure in the League of Nations and head of its Committee on Intellectual Cooperation. This committee proceeded on a principle which appears to have been an adaption of the eighteenth century concept of the Republic of Letters; it supposed that what are sometimes called the things of the spirit—art, literature, philosophy and so on—are great forces of good will and that the international intercourse of artists, writers and learned men offers the surest means of preparing and preserving a climate of confidence and understanding.

Professor Murray, now in his eighty-third year, speaks as a late Victorian liberal whose faith in progress has been grievously shaken but is not yet shattered by the cataclysmic changes he has lived to witness. In a paper first read in 1934 at the depth of the great depression, he contrasts the buoyant ethos of the world in which he came to manhood and the atmosphere of disillusion and despair that surrounds him in old age, when "people speak, as they never spoke in Victorian days, of the possible collapse of civilization." And yet he finds that in such matters as technical advances, the improvement of living standards, the control of disease and the spread of popular education the twentieth century has fulfilled the most extravagant hopes of the nineteenth. Even on the moral plane, he finds some improvement. "It is surely ridiculous," he says, "to maintain that we are wickeder or, in any ethical sense, less Christian than the times, say, of the Tudors or Charles II or the eighteenth century or the Regency. How often in reading history do we find ourselves almost unable to believe the low standard of public morals in this age or that! How often when we read the doings of some seventeenth or eighteenth century statesman do we reflect that a man who behaved like that nowadays would disappear in a few months in a blaze of scandal." Even the disastrous errors of British foreign policy, he thinks, had their inspiration in a kind of perverse charity, that is, in a "tendency to trust people who were not to be trusted, to forgive people by whom we were not forgiven, just because our normal public life at home has been free from gross fraud and sanguinary vindictiveness."

Thus the explanation of the pessimistic modern temper is not to be found in any concrete evidences of degeneration and decay, but in a kind of insecurity of the imagination. The Victorian Age, whatever its conflicts, possessed a reasonably clear cosmological vision which ours does not. However, the Victorians might quarrel about home rule or disestablishment or woman suffrage, there was nevertheless "an approximate unanimity among reasonable educated people about the fundamentals of life. . . . We accepted the nebular hypothesis and the doctrine of evolution. . . . We looked on science as a liberator and benefactor. We had a generally agreed system of practical ethics. . . . There was a general loosening of religious dogma, no doubt, but the movement implied no lowering of ethical standards." This snug and comfortable universe was disrupted by Planck, Einstein and Freud and by the impact of the new and revolutionary ways of life resulting from the techniques of mass production. Yet in 1934 the professor found reason to hope that, despite the rising cult of violence and the lethal vulgarities of Hollywood, the popular press and the science of propaganda, Western civilization might somehow struggle out of its moral and intellectual chaos toward a new Weltanschauung and so regain its equilibrium.

Even after a second war which has resulted in a worldwide desolation almost unimaginable even in 1934, Professor Murray does not despair. Faith, in the sense of a cosmological vision, may indeed be lost, hope may be lost, but there abideth the charity that can unite in a common effort all men of good will, freethinker and Catholic, Christian and Jew, Moslem and Hindu. Thus he reverts to his original thesis that civilization may yet be rescued by its choicest spirits and its purest minds.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

In Order To Repair The Damage:

EVEN THOUGH, as now it seems possible, we manage to stay in Berlin without having to fight a war about it, we still have suffered a serious diplomatic setback. The price of peace with honor is to recede from a position to which we were spectacularly committed—from the German policy which Mr. Bevin and Mr. Marshall adopted, and imposed on M. Bidault, at the London conference which ended early in June. The London agreements called for a provisional government for western Germany in Frankfurt, operating under a constitution drafted by a German constituent assembly, and approved by the three western military governors.

LIPPMANN

Though the London agreements did not preclude an eventual four-power agreement about the whole of Germany, they did assume that the three powers alone could and would be able to present the Russians with an accomplished fact—namely, a western German state, which was self-supporting within the European Recovery Program, and politically aligned with the West against the East.

This German policy would have collapsed even if the Russians had not put the squeeze on us in Berlin. For the Germans themselves refused to carry it out. The French government, which we pushed into approving it, was undermined and the French Foreign Minister, M. Bidault, who was made to feel he had to defend it, has been overthrown. Now, with Mr. Bevin leading the retreat, we are going to do the very thing which the London agreements assumed we would not do: We are conceding the main point, which is that four-power negotiations about the whole of Germany may be resumed before we have created a western German state.

The Russians have won a cheap and easy diplomatic victory by seizing and exploiting the opportunity which we so unwisely and so unnecessarily provided for them. They have been enabled to force us out of a theoretical position which we held only on paper, in the London agreements, but had never established and consolidated in western Germany and in Europe.

SO IN JUNE and July we have suffered a damaging, though not necessarily an irreparable, diplomatic reverse. From the announcement of the Marshall Plan in June, 1947, until after the Italian election, the Soviets were fighting a rear guard action in western Europe, and there were many impressive signs that their grip on eastern Europe was weakening, and that they knew it. But about a month ago they recovered the diplomatic initiative: At least temporarily there was a sudden and sharp reversal, and the western powers were thrown back on the defensive.

The sequence of events shows plainly that it was the London agreements about Germany which placed us in an untenable position, which gave the Russians not only the pretext but the opportunity and the means for a powerful and effective diplomatic counter-offensive. In the London agreements we had, with a good deal of fanfare, committed ourselves to a German policy which we could not carry out because it had no genuine support anywhere on the European continent, which would not have worked if it had been carried out because it is an economic impossibility, which, if the Germans were willing to carry it out, would have ended inexorably either in a world war or in a German-Russian deal at the expense of the rest of Europe.

WE MUST, of course, regret that we have had to retreat under Soviet pressure, and in the midst of the spectacular crisis in Berlin. But we need have no regrets that we must revise the policy. It has never reflected the real views and the true judgment of the Americans who are supposed to make our foreign policy. Nor is it consistent with the ideals, principles, and plans of our bipartisan policy for European revival, security, and settlement.

The prime mover of this German policy, though it was negotiated by the American Ambassador in London, was General Clay, seconded by his advisers in Berlin, his immediate superiors in the Pentagon, notably Mr. Draper and Mr. Royall, and by British officials in Germany and in the foreign office. The basic conception of the policy is in direct contradiction with the understanding reached by Mr. Marshall, Mr. Dulles and Mr. Bidault when they were together in Moscow in the early spring of 1947.

The understanding was that a German settlement must be fitted into a European settlement, and that restoration of German government must follow, not precede, the construction of a framework of European unity.

MR. MARSHALL'S foreign policy—not only the recovery program but his sponsorship of western union—meant that there would be no German government before western Europe was sufficiently organized, united and rehabilitated to collaborate with a loose confederation of the German states. But Mr. Marshall never succeeded in making himself the master of our German policy. General Clay, like General MacArthur, has been a proconsul, as respects the State Department very nearly an independent sovereign with whom the department could now and then negotiate, to whom it has never been able to issue orders. This situation developed under Secretary Byrnes, who, partly because of his preoccupation with the satellite treaties, partly because of his admiration for General Clay, was never able or willing to bring German policy under the control of the State Department.

It was supposed that Mr. Marshall—being himself a general of enormous prestige—would not fail to assert his authority over all the generals. But Mr. Marshall has not done that, and as a result our German policy, which is crucial to the success of our foreign policy, has never as yet been made in the State Department. Perhaps it will now be made there. Perhaps our predicament in Berlin, and the hair-raising measures needed to bail ourselves out of it, will at long last have convinced Mr. Marshall, who passed over the public admonitions of Mr. Dewey and Mr. Dulles on this very point, that he cannot have a European policy and let the military authorities in Berlin make their own German policy.

IF SO, something good may yet come out of the Berlin affair. For if once we can extricate ourselves from the Berlin predicament, and find our way out of the blind alley of the London agreements, the basic trend of events in Europe, which is in our favor, may help us to repair most of the damage of the past few years.

There is little doubt, it seems to me, that the Communist power is unable to expand into western Europe, and it is highly probable that the Soviet power in eastern Europe is no longer at high tide, and is receding. In Bulgaria, in Yugoslavia, in North Greece, in Finland, in Trieste, in Czechoslovakia, the signs of recession are many. They are confirmed by the softening of the Russian demands on Austria, and unmistakably, I think by the immensely significant, though it has been generally ignored, modification of the Soviet position on Germany which was announced at Warsaw on June 24. The underlying trend is favorable, but only if we know how to favor it by a diplomatic policy which makes us in fact, not the Russians only and by default, the advocates of a general European settlement which restores Europe to the Europeans.

Study of Promiscuous Girls Aids D.C. Venereal Disease War

Finding of a California experiment in psychiatric treatment of promiscuous girls are being studied here for pointers in the District fight on gonorrhea, it was learned yesterday.

Results of the San Francisco study indicate that the so-called goodtime girls are less sex-hungry than popularly believed, but definitely constitute a major source for the spread of gonorrhea, syphilis and other venereal diseases.

Of primary importance to District Health officers are findings on the habits, backgrounds, environmental and economic status of the girls studied, according to Dr. S. Ross Taggart, chief of the District Health Department's division on venereal diseases.

Such factors, said Dr. Taggart, may serve as a guide for the District's distribution of some 450,000 pamphlets on the dangers of gonorrhea and its quick, painless cure with penicillin. For one year, ending next July, the District offers free penicillin and confidential treatment to gonorrhea victims.

The pioneering experiment to learn mental attitudes and motivations of the promiscuous was conducted by the San Francisco and California State health departments, and United States Public Health Service.

Psychiatric study was made of 365 young women, of which number 287 were classified by admittedly arbitrary standards as promiscuous. The remaining 78 chosen were selected as potentially promiscuous "because of personality and situational factors."

Defined as promiscuous were: Married women who engaged in extramarital sexual relations within six months of registration for the study; single women with admitted relations with more than one man in that period; and single women who had relations more than once with the same man in the preceding six months.

Some of the findings included:

Sixty-one per cent of the women interviewed said they did not particularly enjoy sexual intercourse, justifying their behavior on other varying grounds.

About one fifth of those admitting voluntary premarital relations reported they either had become pregnant or infected with a venereal disease as a result of the first experience.

Some patients blamed their parents for not giving them adequate sex information; others said their first experience followed false accusations by their parents of promiscuity.

Eighty per cent of the promiscuous patients and 74 per cent of the potentially promiscuous were infected with a venereal disease, 72 per cent having gonorrhea.

Basic factors suggesting a relationship to promiscuity included broken homes, unstable inter-personal relationships, neurotic tendencies and environmental factors.

Approximately two-thirds of the promiscuous patients were living alone or with friends, usually in third and fourth class hotels.

Both groups said they frequented commercialized recreational facilities, such as beach concessions, public dance halls and bars; their reading consisted chiefly of "pulp" romance and detective stories.

90 Boy Students to Run Government At Friday Forum

Ninety high school seniors, most of them about 17 years old, will converge on Washington Friday from 45 States for the third annual Boys Forum of National Government, sponsored by the American Legion.

The forum, to be held for one week on the campus of American University, will give the boys a chance to meet President Truman, members of Congress, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and various Federal agencies.

They will also elect a boy President, hold imitation congressional and Supreme Court sessions, and take a look at the Capital's sights.

Matter Of Fact

The Meaning Of Wallace

PHILADELPHIA.

THE THIRD PARTY rally here this weekend, carefully stage-managed by a small group of pro-Communists, leaves a more unpleasant taste in the mouth than most such affairs. Henry A. Wallace's ghoulish performance at his press conference set the tone. It was somehow painful and embarrassing to see the press conference of a former Vice President of the United States turned into something hardly more edifying than the baiting of a village idiot. But what has made the whole business really depressing has been the fact that a good deal of perfectly honest idealism has been on display here.

It has been a melancholy experience to talk with the delegates on the floor of Convention Hall. Some of them have, of course, been Communists, particularly those from the East Coast. The Communists have been instantly recognizable—the slick automatic line, the mechanical indignation, the old hackneyed phrases. But although the Communists have run this performance from beginning to end, they have been a small minority. Most of the people who have made their way from all points of the Union to join Henry Wallace's "crusade" have seemed to these reporters to lack the political sophistication even to be conscious fellow travelers.

When asked why they are for Wallace, these people talk of many things. A Negro will talk, with passionate sincerity, of his right to be more than a second-class citizen. A Jew, with equal sincerity, will talk of Hitler and anti-Semitism and Palestine. A Scandinavian farmer, from a Middle Western State, will talk of the cooperative movement in which he has spent his life, and his curious conviction that it will be destroyed and his bitter memories of the depression. An aging Townsendite will recite his fears for his old age. But most typical is the young former marine who hitchhiked from a Southwestern State because he wanted "peace."

SOONER OR LATER they all talk of peace. And almost all of them when they talk of peace reveal an astonishing fund of misinformation that Russia has been disarming completely while America has been building atom bombs; that no one has ever tried to "get along with Russia;" that the governments of eastern Europe are what they are because "the people want it that way;" that the Marshall Plan was "cooked up in Wall Street," and so on.

This sort of thing is quite obviously a misty and often distorted reflection of the Communist line. It is most often a perfectly unconscious reflection of the Communist line. The great majority of the people here are being used, carefully and astutely, by the Communists. The one man who has made it possible for the Communists to use them is, of course, Henry A. Wallace.

Without Wallace, this would be merely another talkative rally staged by a wholly unimportant Communist front organization. It is impossible to imagine the Communists working up any sort of political movement behind the banner of the dreary Tugwell or the ludicrous Taylor. But because the malleable, ambitious, self-deluding Wallace has allowed himself to be captured by the little group of pro-Stalinists who now completely surround him and isolate him from his old associates, the American Communists have undoubtedly scored a considerable political success.

NO ONE who has witnessed this macabre spectacle can any longer doubt that it has been managed from top to bottom by the Communists, small minority though the Communists are of the Wallace following. Two of the half dozen or so men who have been most conspicuously active here are reported likely soon to be indicted on the basis of evidence before the New York grand jury. The "Youth for Wallace" rally which is to be staged as a footnote to the "convention" will be quite openly under the direction of Seymour Linfield, formerly one of the most active members of the Young Communist League. And so on. The question remains: How important has been the Communist success in using Wallace to promote Communist political ends?

For the immediate future, it seems most unlikely that the Wallace movement will have any decisive political effect. If Wallace had devoted his entire attention to hybrid corn, the odds on Thomas E. Dewey in November would still be very heavy. It does seem possible that the Communists will succeed in their objective of defeating a number of non-Communist liberals, in Illinois, Minnesota, California and elsewhere, and electing right-wing isolationists in their place. Even so, it is not probable that the Communists' Wallace gambit will have any real immediate effect on American foreign policy or on the political balance of power in the United States.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE TROUBLE with baseball is that too many rich men own ball clubs, according to Clark Griffith, who owns a ball club but disclaims being a rich man. Inferentially, Mr. Griffith is not one of the troubles with baseball.

POVICH

Mr. Griffith's findings with respect to the evils of rich-man ownership are not of recent date. He has been bemoaning the incursion of multimillionaire hobbyists in baseball for a dozen years now, but the other day the moans gave way to a sharp cry of pain.

That was when the rich Detroit Tigers refused to play night games in Washington, and Mr. Griffith, counting the till at the end of three-day games with Detroit, totalled up only 8000 admissions.

Now a crowd of 8000 is not considered an average turnout for one night game, and Mr. Griffith was highly displeased at the Tigers' refusal to play at night. His Nats were slightly hot at the time, and he estimates that the three night games would have drawn at least 45,000 customers.

"IT'S NO GOOD," says Mr. Griffith, "when a ball club is owned by a rich man who doesn't need the money." He was speaking, of course, of the Detroit ownership which, besides owning the Tigers, owns the big auto plants that build all the bodies for four of America's popular-make cars.

What Griffith is quarreling with is the Tigers' policy of playing only three night games on the road in each city. The Detroit brass, it seems, is of the feeling that night baseball can be overdone and is threatening the game as a day-time sport, and in that stand is aligned with the rich Boston Red Sox and the rich New York Yankees in a three-club bloc to restrain night play.

"Our Wasnington fans long ago expressed their preference for night games," says Mr. Griffith. "The Tigers gave our fans no consideration. They were deprived of the opportunity to see ball games. The Washington club was deprived of the revenue that would enable us to bid for young players which the rich clubs are always trying to tie up for themselves."

NIGHT BALL and the profits from it, could be the great leveller, Mr. Griffith says. "It prevents domination of the league by the rich clubs like Boston, Detroit and New York. Look at the Athletics and the Indians. They aren't wealthy clubs, but they're right up there able to bid with the rich ones and win the pennant, too. If we'd had night ball years ago, you wouldn't have heard the cry of 'break up the Yankees.' We'd have taken care of that."

It has been the poorer clubs who have been the most progressive anyway, Griffith says. "I'll even give credit to Larry MacPhail, of whom I am not fond. He was struggling with the Cincinnati Reds when he originated night ball and struck on the most popular innovation in the history of the game. The idea of night games would not have occurred to a rich club that didn't need the money.

"I didn't like night games myself at the outset. They didn't seem natural. But I'll admit that I began to like the bigger gate receipts, and the fans were quick to make us understand that they liked 'em. Except on weekends, holidays and early in the season, baseball as a day-time sport belongs to the past and there's nothing to do but admit it."

THE NIGHT before the Nats played to a 2700 daylight crowd against the Tigers, there were 17,000 in the stands to see the team play Cleveland. Even the Browns and White Sox play to an average of 12,000 fans in night games here. Happily for Mr. Griffith, those clubs like himself, have need of the money and are eager to play at night.

"I'm going to take it up again with the league at the December meeting," says Griffith. "Right now, the situation is that a home team can book as many night games as it likes, if it gets the consent of the visiting club. The Yankees are relenting a bit and so are the Red Sox. But the Tigers are sticking to their rule of three night games in each city, despite the fact they have installed lights in their own park.

"I'm going to propose unrestrained night baseball without being dependent on the permission of the visiting club. There's no sense trying to push the public around. They want night games, and with the money they pay we would be in a position to give them better baseball."

Protests Delay

Menendez Wants Own Docs To Pass on Charles' Trouble

Gabe Menendez, matchmaker for the Variety Club's Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins fight scheduled here August 2, yesterday demanded that the District Boxing Commission summon Charles to Washington immediately for a physical examination before granting him a postponement, which the commission is expected to do today.

The Boxing Commission meets this afternoon to consider a report from a Cincinnati doctor who examined Charles and recommended a postponement of at least a week.

The report of Dr. Walter Phillips, Boxing Commission physician, said that Charles is receiving treatment for hemorrhoids.

Dr. Phillips examined Charles Saturday at the behest of the D. C. Commission when Charles requested a postponement. Chairman Heinie Miller of the local ring group said: "We will be guided in our decision by the report of Dr. Phillips."

Menendez will appear before the commission today.

Charles requested that the fight be delayed until August 9, but Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club, has reserved that date for a show of his own and said he will not relinquish his rights to Griffith Stadium that evening. MORRIS SIEGEL.

Jockey, 22, Dies After Spill From Blind Horse

Cumberland, Md., July 25 (AP).—Alpine Boy, the 12-year-old gelding which charged into the inner rail of the Fairgo Race Track yesterday and fatally injuring Jockey Benny Leggett, was blind in both eyes, Dr. W. E. Trussell, veterinarian for the Charleston, W. Va., race track, said tonight.

Leggett, 22, died today in a Cumberland hospital. Death was attributed to a severe concussion and contusions of the brain.

Dr. Trussell said he had barred Alpine Boy from the Charlestown track last year and again this year because of his blindness. Officials of the Fairgo half-mile track tonight barred the horse from its track.

Nats Split Twin Bill, 5-1 and 6-4

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

After pocketing the first game, 5-1, the Nats yesterday foolishly gave the St. Louis Browns a chance to win the nightcap, and the Browns did, 6-4, in 11 innings.

Don Lund, former Michigan football star, batted in the decisive tallies in the eleventh with a bloop double. Lund owed his chance to perform for his new employers in this crisis to Al Kozar, who bobbled a pop fly in short right field to set the stage for Lund's performance.

Kozar's untimely error ruined an otherwise pleasant afternoon for 10,618 customers who had previously seen Ray Scarborough pitch and bat himself to his eighth victory of the year against five defeats.

The personal victim of Kozar's fumble was Pitcher Forrest Thompson. But Thompson couldn't have been put out too much about his luck because two innings earlier the Browns miscued on a game-ending out and allowed the Nats to tie it.

Stevens Let It Get Away

With two away in the ninth and Mickey Vernon on second as the result of a single and sacrifice, Thompson rolled to Gerry Priddy. Priddy tossed to Chuck Stevens at first, but Stevens allowed the ball to go through him, and Vernon scampered in to tie the game at 4-4.

Came the eleventh and defeat for the Nats. With two away and Eddie Pellagrini on first with the tenth of 11 Brownie hits, Bob Dillinger popped to short right. Kozar gloved the ball, but dropped it for a two-base error, Pellagrini holding up at third.

On the first pitch, Lund raised a fly to left center which fell safely for a double, as his two playmates scored. Until that point, all the Brownie runs stemmed from the big bat of Rookie Dick Kokos.

The first of his three hits was a two-run double in the first inning off Earl Harrist. His second a triple, also delivering two runs in the third and was also off Mr. Harist.

Toledo Rookie on Mound

Handed a 4-1 lead, Rookie Ralph Schwamb, an overnight arrival from Toledo, couldn't hold it and was driven out in the seventh when Jake Early singled in two runs to pull the Nats up to a 4-3 disadvantage.

Bryan Stephens, Cleveland's contribution to this year's ever-changing St. Louis team, quelled the Nats until the ninth when Stevens came through with his error to force him to work overtime.

Scarborough staked himself to a 3-0 lead in the second inning of the opener by slamming a double off Fred Sanford with the bases loaded.

Sanford, losing his eleventh game, set the stage for his downfall by walking Earl Wooten and Early after Vernon had launched the uprising with a single with two outs.

Wild Pitch Scores One

The big Brownie right-hander threw in the next Nat run in the fifth, uncorking a wild pitch which allowed Kozar, who had tripled, to score and make it 4-0.

Wooten's triple and Early's fly to Al Zarilla in leftfield brought in the final Nat run in the eighth.

Scarborough, never in serious trouble, lost his shutout in the ninth on a walk, Kokos' single and two infield outs.

IN SHORT—Gil Coan made one of his "Yankee Stadium catches" in the opener, dipping into the leftfield boxes to grab Gerry Priddy's long fly . . . Dick Kokos, the Browns' rookie rightfielder, murdered Nat pitching in the three-game series . . . He made four hits Saturday, two in the first game yesterday and three more in the nightcap . . . Al Evans, out with a bangedup finger on his throwing hand, will be left at home when the Nats depart for a 16-game Western trip today. He'll rejoin the club in Cleveland next week . . . The western trek also includes an exhibition against an All-Star team in Lafayette, Ind., Thursday evening . . . Either Forrest Thompson or Dick Welteroth will open against the White Sox Tuesday night in Chicago.

Gene Wolfe Wins Title in Playoff With Mouser

Eugene Wolfe, Silver Spring, won the Maryland State Junior Open Golf Championship at Chevy Chase yesterday by shooting 77 against 80 for Stanley Mouser, Bethesda.

Wolfe and Mouser scored 74 each at the Baltimore Country Club last Friday and yesterday's match was a playoff for the title. Both are 17 years old.

Wolfe had a two-stroke advantage on the first nine with 40 to 42. He increased his margin to four shots on the fourteenth when Mouser got into trouble and went 2 over par.

Wolfe clinched the title on No. 17 by tapping in an 18-foot putt for a birdie.

3 Homers Help Yanks to Win Chisox Pair

New York, July 25 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio socked two homers and Billy Johnson one to pace the New York Yankees to a 7-3 triumph over the Chicago White Sox today in the second game of a doubleheader. The Yanks also copped the opener, 5-3, behind the nine-hit pitching of Ed Lopat.

Lopat hurled his seventh consecutive victory and tenth of the season in the first game, and Vic Raschi registered his twelfth success with a six-hitter in the afterpiece.

DiMaggio slammed a two-run homer in the first inning of the second game to highlight a three-run opening, doubled in the third and led off the fifth with his twenty-third circuit clout.

Bill Johnson responded with his eighth homer in the seventh, which drove in the Yanks' last three tallies.

Pat Seerey exploded his thirteenth homer with one on during a three-run Sox uprising in the fourth. That was the only frame Raschi was scored upon, however.

Carroll in Charge

Brooklyn All-Stars Arrive Today for Tuesday's Game

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Owen Carroll leads his Brooklyn All-Star squad into town this afternoon and tomorrow night will take it out to Griffith Stadium to meet Coach Jim Munro's Washington All-Stars.

The Brooklyn boys, top sandlot and high school players of Brooklyn and Long Island, are scheduled to arrive at Union Station at 5:10 p. m. and they'll go immediately to the Martinique Hotel.

At 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night, they'll try to avenge the crushing 12-2 setback handed them by the cream of the local Junior League crop before 13,000 at Ebbets Field recently.

George Sisler, one of baseball's great, managed the Brooklyns in that one. He is driving here for the game but Carroll manages the club on a road trip that includes stops at Halifax, Toronto, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Providence, R. I.

Sisler, whose .420 batting average is still the best ever made in the American League, may get a chance to take a couple of swings at the offerings of Bobo Newsom.

Carroll stepped right from Holy Cross to the majors and pitched in the big time for nine years with Detroit, New York Yankees, Cincinnati and Brooklyn. He now coaches Seton Hall.

Billy (Not-Hit) Loes will start for the Brooklyns tomorrow night. Named the best ball player in the Metropolitan New York area, he's thrown four no-hitters this season and one last year.

Newsom Will Pitch to Kids

Bobo Newsom is going to pitch to the kids in batting practice at Griffith Stadium Tuesday night as an added feature of the Brooklyn vs. Washington All-Star sandlot game.

The gay, great guy of the big show yesterday definitely said that he will "give those kids some big league stuff to look at."

Just for fun, a ringer may be brought to the plate against Bobo. He is George Sisler, one of the American League's all-time batting champions.

Sisler will be here with the Brooklyn club. He will be invited to take a few cuts at Bobo's fastball.

When Bobo finishes his trick on the mound, he will dash up to the radio broadcasting booth and join Walter Haight, The Washington Post's race horse writer, on the public address system.

Old Bobo has been known to surpass Dizzy Dean in uttering homespun phrases.

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Baby, owned and ridden by the prominent 14-year-old Claire Taylor, performed his way to two championships at the Silver Spring Pony and Junior Show, which brought out one of the best and largest collections of entries to be seen at any one-day show this season, held yesterday at the North End show grounds in Silver Spring, Md.

Top entries from all parts of Maryland, Virginia, and the District crowded the rolling show grounds to vie for the nine championships in the day-long program of 29 classes. Baby accounted for the tri-colors in both the hunter and jumper divisions of the intermediate class ponies.

Fritz Burkhart's famous old pony, Limerick Lace, from Baltimore, Md., took the top hunter award and reserve jumper title in the large pony events. Limerick was ridden by his owner, one of the Nation's top teen-age riders.

Macks Split With Tigers, Drop to 2d

Philadelphia, July 25 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics split a pair of games with Detroit today and dropped 4 percentage points behind the Boston Red Sox in the torrid American League flag fight.

Joe Coleman blanked the Tigers, 4-0, in the opener, but the visitors came back to trample the A's, 10-2, in the nightcap.

The Red Sox picked up a half game on the A's by licking Cleveland in a single game, and thus the two Eastern clubs were in a virtual first-place tie as they prepared for a key Western road trip.

The Athletics' pennant hopes suffered a severe blow today as two key players were sidelined with injuries.

Elmer Valo, hard-hitting outfielder, was carried from the field by teammates when he injured his right ankle sliding into third base in the second game of the twin bill with Detroit.

First Baseman Ferris Fain is lost to the club for a week. He suffered a broken finger collaring Vico's liner in Saturday's game.

Valo was given first aid treatment by the A's trainer and then sent to a hospital for X-ray examination.

Coleman had the Tigers eating out of his hand in the opener and never was in serious trouble as he wrapped up his second shutout in a week and scored his tenth victory of the campaign.

He did some fancy stickwork, too, driving in two runs in a four-run fourth-inning splurge that provided the A's with their winning margin over Virgil (Fire) Trucks.

The Athletics wound up their home stand against Western clubs with a record of eight victories and six losses.

Turf Unlimited

Night Flat Racing Not New in Md.

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

SHOULD MARYLAND'S major tracks go in for night racing it would not be an innovation in the State. Baltimore's Electric Park featured noctural turf sport before 1910. . . . Gallorette, the leading distaff money-winning horse of all time, was foaled on the birthday of her present owner, Mrs. W. L. Brann. . . . Incidentally, Walter Haight, the horse, was foaled on the birthday of this big hunk of man. . . . Dick Hutchinson, jr., the hard-working young president of the Laurel Raceway, picked the trotting dates for this track because they came at a time when he remembered hay was made on the farm. . . . The harness boys, however, had a dead heat with the weather just getting in under their alloted five rain nights. But I had it from a top source that had it rained toward the end of the meeting, the Maryland Racing Commission would have allowed them to complete their 20 nights, regardless. . . . Don't be surprised if some of the Maryland running tracks try to muscle in on Bowie's early April and late November dates next year. . . . Marlboro would be a nice spot for night flat racing. . . . Why not run harness racing at Laurel's mile track during the off-seson? The sport made oodles of money at Santa Anita. . . . Breaking (horses getting out of stride) would not be frequent at the trot-pace tracks if the class of horses was better, so I'm told.

CALUMET says Armed will be permanently retired. I don't believe it. He is a gelding and of no value in the stud naturally. Should he become sound again, it's a cinch he will be raced . . . Ray Haight will be on the PA system at Wheeling for the 55-day meeting opening on July 31. You might be stuck with him at Laurel in October . . . California tracks keep coming up with $50,000 added races, but they have a hard time luring top horses from the East, except for the Santa Anita Handicap which has come to be known as a "traditional race," although it can only point back to 1933 . . . Atlantic City, with red-hot summer dates, looks like the biggest money-making New Jersey track . . . By the way, don't be surprised if Pennsylvania comes up with a racing law. Then there will be a sizzling battle for dates aimed at the big betting population of Philadelphia, now being fought over by Jersey, Delaware and Maryland . . . Add Havre de Grace's woes: Being sued for infringement of patent rights by Puett starting gate people . . . The longest lines at Laurel Raceway on that record final night weren't in front of the mutuel windows, but outside the rest rooms . . . The success of the raceway means that the Oxon Hill and Ocean City harness establishments won't have to look far for financial backing, if needed . . . See you at Marlboro.

Parker Wins Eastern Title

Pelham, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Frank Parker of Los Angeles, won the Eastern clay court tennis championship today by defeating Billy Talbert of New York, 6-3, 8-6, 6-2. Parker was seeded first.

Jeff Heath's Homer Paves Way for Win

St. Louis, July 25 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals and the Boston Braves split a couple of close decisions today, the Redbirds taking the first game, 6 to 5, with a two-run ninth inning rally and the Braves rallying for seven runs in the last two innings of the nightcap to win, 8 to 6.

Home runs by Bob Elliott and Jeff Heath in the ninth, the former's with two men on base, enabled the league leaders to get an even break for the day.

Reds Down Phils In Both Tilts, 11-8, 9-2

Cincinnati, July 25 (AP).—Ewell Blackwell pitched a five-hit second game against the Philadelphia Phils today, giving the Reds a 9-2 victory. Kent Peterson singlehandly stopped a ninth inning Phil rally in the first game by striking out the final two batters with the bases loaded as the Reds, won, 11-8.

Frankie Baumholtz, the Red rightfielder, clamped the lid on the Phils with a grand-slam homer in the sixth inning of the second game.

Bell 8 to 5 Over Hursey in Fight Tonight

Washington's Smuggy Hursey will be an 8-5 underdog tonight when he faces Tommy Bell of Youngstown, Ohio, in a 10-round bout in Griffith Stadium.

Despite Hursey's "revenge" cry and his handling by Larry Amadee, former Joe Louis second, Bell is being given the betting nod on the basis of his record and the decision he won by knocking down Hursey in their last meeting.

Hursey will weigh in at 155 and should hold a five-pound edge on his hard-hitting rival. He has won but one fight since his bout with Bell last September, a decision over Cecil Hudson who has whipped Bell twice and Jake LaMotta once.

Johnny Arduini, Washington bantamweight, will face Lew Yonkers of Roanoke, Va., in a six-round preliminary tonight. They will be meeting for the third time. Each has won once from the other.

In another six-rounder Tommy Bennett will oppose Bobby McQuillar. Two four-round bouts pair Billy Gray against Red Gaddis and Puggy Lyons against Jimmy Hawkins. First bout is at 8:30.

Stymie Retires to Stud With Broken Bone; Has $911,335 Winnings in 126 Starts

New York, July 25 (AP).—Stymie, former $1,500 bargain counter plater who became the leading money-winning horse in the world, was retired from racing today. Ironically, the tough old turf veteran collected exactly $1500 in his last race.

Hirsch Jacobs, who trained the sturdy 7-year-old chestnut campaigner for his wife, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs of Forest Hills, N. Y., said Stymie suffered a fractured sesamoid bone in his right forefoot running forth in the Monmouth Park handicap yesterday at Oceanport, N. J.

That left his alltime earnings at $911,335 and $88,665 short of becoming the first horse in history to win one million dollars.

Jacobs said Stymie would be sent to Kentucky for breeding purposes when the injury is healed.

Not the greatest horse of his day, Stymie was, however, one of the toughest.

Metropolitan racing fans didn't call him "The Pride of Brooklyn" or the "Sweetheart of New York" for nothing. Stymie went to the post 126 times and right down to the end yesterday he packed high weight in the major handicaps.

He won 35 races, 25 of them stakes, was second 32 times, third on 26 occasions and was unplaced 33 times. Exterminator, racing's famed "Old Bones," raced 100 times, while Display, termed the "Iron Horse" of his day, folded up after 103 starts.

The Monmouth was the eleventh start of 1948 for the son of Equestrian-Stop Watch, which was foaled at the King Ranch in Texas, April 9, 1941. He won four, was second three times, and ran third twice, earning $95,275, compared with $299,775 in taking 7 out of 19 starts a year ago.

He never ran in the Kentucky Derby, but was second in the Wood Memorial in 1944, and then sixth in the Preakness.

Jacobs said Stymie's foot would be put in a cast, and he would remain at Monmouth Park until he can be moved to the Jacobs farm—Stymie Manor—near Monkton, Md. When he is fully recovered, he will go to Kentucky.

Nicholson Hits 200th Homer As Cubs Win

Chicago, July 25 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs pounded Ray Poat off the mound with a four-run tally in the fourth inning, highlighted by Eddie Waitkus' inside-the-park homer with two on, and defeated the New York Giants, 6 to 3, here today before 28,456.

Bobby Thompson hit his twelfth homer for the Giants and Bill Nicholson walloped No. 14 for the Cubs. It also was the 200th of his career.

Nicholson's fourteenth homer of the season made him the twelfth player in National League history to total 200 homers in his career. Waitkus' homer, however, proved decisive.

Jay Wolfe's 5-Under-Par 30 Sets Indian Spring Record

JAY WOLFE set a new record for the second nine at Indian Spring yesterday, by shooting a five-under-par 30. He was out in 39 for an 18-hole score of 69.

Mrs. George Inoff won the Abe S. Kay women's trophy with 92—20—63. Her 18-hole score of 92 was the best she has ever done by 10 strokes. Mrs. Eli Amanuell was second with 96—30—66. Mrs. K. S. Giles won low gross with an excellent card of 39—39—78.

Dan N. Bondariff made a hole-in-one on the 63-yard third hole, hitting a No. 7 iron. Playing with him were Mike Sussman, Bernie Margolis and Sam Littman.

In a blind bogey tourney for the benefit of District youngsters going to a national junior tournament in Lincoln, Nebr., $80 was raised. Prize winners were J. Pascel, 87—16—71; Ted Collyer, 86—10—76; Herbert Papier, 90—5—85, and Tom Boteler, 88—10—78.

ARGYLE—WINNERS of the blind bogey tourney were: Joe Byers, 89—14—75; Dell Blue 85—10—75; Joe Canova, 87—12—75; Martin Carpenter, 87—12—75; Jimmy Lake, 86—11—75, and Noland Gibson, 80—5—75.

Charles Mattern and Harold Cutler won the two-man championship.

WOODMONT—Jack Jaffe defeated Burt Lustine, 2 and 1, yesterday to win the Woodmont Country Club's junior championship. In the junior intermediate finale, Mandell Ourisman scored a two-up victory over Charles Goldsmith. Everett Steinem won the Class A sweepstakes with a 77—9—68. Second was Willard Goldheim, 78—7—71. Dr. H. F. Bernstein won in Class B with 80—12—63 and Max Glazer was the winner of competition in Class C with his 91—20—71.

ANACOSTIA—In the rubber match of a three-match series, Anacostia defeated East Potomac, 26-10, yesterday on the Potomac course.

Bill Swann and Dr. R. A. Cole of Anacostia had the lowest individual scores, 69 each. Par is 67.

In the day's No. 1 match, Cole and W. W. Seay defeated Earl Marcey, former public links champion, and Joe Kotvan of East Potomac, 3 and 2. Cole and Seay had a best ball of 66.

PRINCE GEORGES — The Country Jakes defeated the City Slickers, 44½ to 30½ in the biggest fun day of the season. Joe Balestri of the Slickers had the lowest score, even par 72.

When the final results were in, the City Slickers ganged up on Bob Bowie, captain of the winning Country Jakes and threw him into the swimming pool with his golf clothes on. Eddie Johnson captained the losers. Bowie scored an eagle 3 on the 498-yard tenth hole, reaching home in two and sinking an 8-foot putt.

EAST POTOMAC—George Hopkins scored a 216-yard hole-in-one with a spoon yesterday on the second hole of the "D" course at East Potomac Park. He was playing with John Powers, George Hannon and J. Enright.

MANOR—K. B. Lewis and D. W. Lamb won the two-man team championship by defeating Don Sullivan and C .W. Stoddard, 3 and 2. Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Burrows won the mixed Scotch foursome low gross with 37—43—80. Tied for low net were Mrs. R. D. Watson and G. E. Getty, 83—13—70, and Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Myers, 88—18—70.

KENWOOD—Mrs. Ed Widmayer and Robert Redick won low net in mixed Scotch foursome play with 75—9—66. Low gross went to Mrs. C. T. Redick and Lou Semia with 80. Other low net winners were: Second, Mrs. James Somes and Ed Ragland, 83—16—67; third, Mrs. Frank Ebaugh and James Somes, 85—18—67; fourth, Mrs. Carl Werner and Dr. W. C. Ready, 89—21—68. In the blind bogey, Joe Torbett won first, 88—20—68, and L. S. Stambaugh second with 86—18—68.

COLUMBIA—Mr. and Mrs. Allen Minnix won a four-ball tournament with a total of 152. Tied for second were Mrs. Franklin Gross and W. B. Swanson and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Geleng at 153. Tied for the next position were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lacey, Mr. and Mrs. John Kirkem and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Pray with 155s.

BETHESDA — Gene Arnold carded a 78—14—64 to win the full handicap sweepstakes. Second was G. R. Gaillard, 80—14—66; third, Tom Manning, 73—6—67; fourth, H. D. Hoyle, 83—16—67. F. X. Donaldson won the blind bogey. His card was 85—10—75.

Lincolnia Tops Chantilly

Pitcher Art Lacey allowed but six hits and homered with one on base in the third inning as Lincolnia whipped Chantilly, 6-1, yesterday in the West Fairfax Senior League.

Ted Orndorff batted in four runs with three singles and teammate Luther Hall drove in two runs with three singles to lead Burke to a 12-9 victory over Jermantown. Forestville gained a few percentage points on Lorton, the idle league leaders, with a 9-4 triumph over Vienna Legion.

Gibson Paces Colesville Win

Manager Joe Gibson led Colesville to its eleventh straight win, an 8-7 verdict over Bethesda, yesterday in the Montgomery County League.

When Third Baseman George Bonifant suffered a broken jaw from a batted ball in the fifth inning, Gibson took over at third, drove in one run with a triple in the seventh and stole home. In the ninth he tripled again to score Tommy Marlowe with the winning run.

Al Thompson pitched a three-hitter as Potomac won from Rockville, 9-0, and Wheaton took a doubleheader from Sandy Spring, 8-3 and 4-2.

D. C. Draft Organization To Be Set Up

Organization of the District's peacetime draft machinery, expected to register some 56,000 men from 18 through 25 beginning August 30, will get under way this week.

Lists of draft board members and key Washington Selective Service personnel will be handed the Commissioners "within a week or 10 days," Frank D. Norton, director of the District Office of Selective Service Records, said last night.

Recommendations Asked

Along with Governors of all the States, the Commissioners have been asked by National Selective Service headquarters to submit recommendations for draft board personnel.

Norton, one of a panel of four speakers on Radio Station WINX's District Roundtable forum at 7:30 p. m. yesterday, reported that local boards will be ready for operation "well in advance" of the August 30 registration date.

Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, deputy director of personnel and administration for the Army, said the number of men drafted would depend on how many enlistments and reenlistments the Army gets. He set 30,000 men per month, beginning in October, as an estimate.

National draft headquarters has begun shipment of registration forms over the country, Col. Daniel O. Omer, general counsel of the selective service system, said.

Omer revealed that some men will be deferred because of their occupation. The need of the armed forces, however, will control the "degree of leniency" in occupational deferments, he said.

The forum was modearted by Ben Paul Noble, Washington attorney.

Mrs. Patterson Rites Tuesday

reading in bed, about 1:30 a. m. Saturday, at her country home, Dower House, near Rosaryville, Prince Georges County, Md.

Through family inheritances Mrs. Patterson owned large quantities of stock in the Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News. Her brother was Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, late publisher of the New York Daily News. Her father was Robert Wilson Patterson, one time editor in chief of the Chicago Tribune. Her grandfather, Joseph Medill, founded the Tribune.

Mrs. Patterson's first marriage, to Count Josef Gizycki, in 1904, ended in estrangement and eventually intervention by high United States officials and the Russian Czar before she gained custody of their daughter, Felicia, and returned to this country. She was married again, in 1925, to Elmer Schlesinger, lawyer and former counsel for the United States Shipping Board. He suffered a fatal heart attack in 1929.

After the death of her second husband, she began newspaper work as editor of the Washington Herald at the age of 46.

Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Countess Felicia Gizycka, completed arrangements for the funeral yesterday after consultation with officials of the Joseph Gawler Sons funeral home.

The daughter of the Countess and news columnist Drew Pearson, Mrs. George L. Arnold, of Santa Monica, Calif., and her son, Drew Pearson Arnold, were reported last night en route to Mrs. Patterson's home to attend the funeral services.

Herrick Hurls Upset Victory

Russ Herrick's two-hitter gave the White Sox a 4-3 upset victory over Falls Church Garage and threw the Sox into a three-way tie for fourth place yesterday in the East Fairfax Senior League.

Fairfax strengthened its hold on the lead with a late inning surge which bat Falls Church, 7-5. McLean handed Herndon its ninth straight defeat, 13-4, and Annadale jumped from fifth to third place with a 9-7 triumph over second-place Vienna.

Rayburn Wins His 19th Term

Returns were from 240 of 254 counties, 80 complete.

Jester received 521,168 votes, or 53.84 per cent of the total cast in the Governor's race.

State Representative Roger Q. Evans of Denison, runnerup to Jester, received 221,545, or 22.89 per cent of the vote, and Caso March, Baylor University law professor, 154,179, or 16.52 per cent.

The tabulation gave Rayburn 24,586 votes to 8641 for State Senator G. C. Morris of Greenville, and 5023 for Judge H. Brown of Sherman.

Representative Tom Pickett of the Seventh Texas District appeared to be in a runoff with Nat Patton, whom he unseated as the district's Congressman in 1944. Pickett had 21,984 votes; Patton 19,798, and Burke Summers 5418.

Representative O. Clark Fisher had a slim majority of the votes counted in the Twenty-first Texas District, but there was still a possibility he would be forced into a runoff with former Representative Charles L. South. Fisher had 26,854 votes; South, 12,543, and Howell E. Cobb, 8886.

Runoff primaries were assured in the Tenth District, where Representative Lyndon Johnson did not seek reelection because of his Senate race, and in the Fifteenth District, where Representative Milton H. West did not seek reelection. In the Fifteenth District Judge Lloyd M. Bentsen of McAllen had 10,593 votes; former District Attorney Phillip Kazen of Laredo 8503, and J. T. Ellis, Weslaco businessman, 5876.

Austin City Councilman Homer Thornberry led a field of six in the Tenth District with 22,037 votes. The other place in the runoff was a contest between Williamson County istrict Attorney W. K. McClain, who had 10,836 votes, and Creekmore Fath of Austin, assistant to the director of the Democratic National Committee, who had 10,535.

Colorado Gives Johnson Top Billing for Senate

Denver, July 24 (U.P.). — State Democrats gave Senator Ed C. Johnson top billing tonight in his bid for a third term in the Senate but he faced a stiff primary fight with the former Democratic State chairman. The Democratic State Assembly gave Johnson 853 votes and Gene Cervi of Denver, 535. Both won places on the September primary ballot.

Wherever you go, they're talking DYNAFLOW

From Atlantic to Pacific, it's simply terrific.

Not in a generation — maybe not in two — has any single improvement in automobiles caused the talk or met the instant approval that has greeted this new drive.

You see the reason in your first five minutes behind a Dynaflow* wheel.

You sense that this is not merely an improvement on old ways, but a whole new system of transferring power from your engine to the rear wheels.

For the first time, oil does everything — replaces the friction clutch, eliminates the usual forward gears, even actuates the mechanism by which you change from Driving range to emergency Low and Reverse.

You feel the result in new smoothness that's like riding a mighty tide of flowing oil.

You move from standstill to road speed in one smooth unbroken sweep of power, quick and effortless in getaway and instantly responsive at speed.

You stop by pressing the foot-brake — go again by feeding gas. Once you've set the selector lever, you need not touch it again in normal driving until you're ready to park or back up.

Outside engineers look at Dynaflow and say, "Now you've got something!"

You'll say so too — once you handle a Buick ROADMASTER with this new driving magic.

Try it, first chance you get — and we think you'll want to see your Buick dealer at once to get an order in — with or without a car to trade.

Government Woman, 43, Burned in Explosion

Arlington Victim Dragged Outside By Wife of Texas Congressman

Miss Esther Williams, 43, badly burned and hysterical when an explosion wrecked the kitchen of her Arlington apartment, yesterday was hauled to safety by Mrs. Eugene Worley, wife of the Texas Congressman, who lives next door.

The injured woman was reported in a critical condition at Arlington Hospital last night. Neighbors said she was a Government employe connected with Federal airways.

Mrs. Worley, who lives at 353 N. Glebe rd., said she was sitting in her yard with her children, Eugene, jr., Morgan and Sam Rayburn Worley, and a neighbor, Mrs. R. M. Gillies, when they heard the blast at 349 N. Glebe rd., followed by an agonized scream.

Woman's Clothes Afire

"We ran over and saw the door and part of the wall had been blown out," said Mrs. Worley. "The poor woman was standing in there dazed and her clothes aflame, so we grabbed up some blankets and began to smother them out."

Mrs. Gillies told how she ran to another house and telephoned for an ambulance as Mrs. Worley and Royal E. Rostenbach, 319 N. Quincy st., were dragging the screaming victim from the debris.

Outside, Miss Williams was wrapped in a sheet by Mrs. Harvey Hahm a registered nurse who lives at 3916 N. 4th st., Mrs. Gillies said.

The blast, which apparently originated in the kitchen of Miss William's first-floor apartment tore out the back doorway and demolished a 4-inch plaster partition which separated the kitchen of the apartment from that of Mrs. William J. Whitfield, next door.

Mrs. Whitfield, whose husband is an Army major stationed in Japan, had gone to a nearby theater with her two children, Billy, 7, and Patricia, 5, about an hour before the explosion.

The blast was followed by a fire which resulted when brooms, mops and other inflammable materials in a kitchen closet were ignited by the explosion. Neighbors, forming a "bucket brigade" from a nearby apartment, extinguished the flames before fire apparatus arrived.

Gas Believed Origin

Police and firemen said the blast apparently originated in the gas stove. According to representatives of the Rosslyn Gas Co., there was no evidence of a gas explosion.

However, Mrs. Whitfield said only a few minutes before she left to take her children to the movies she smelled gas in her apartment. She said she checked the pilot light of her gas stove before leaving and determined that it was burning.

The blast was heard and felt by persons living within a several-block radius of the building, but it caused no damage other than to the two adjoining apartments. It scattered furniture in the living rooms of Miss Williams' apartment and blew out several front windows, but principal damage was confined to the kitchen.

According to persons living nearby, Miss Williams had lived alone in the apartment for several years. Her family reportedly live in New Jersey.

Aide at National City Tells of Progress in Integration Plans

Eventual union of the Disciples of Christ and the Northern Baptist Church may result through integration of their separate programs, the Rev. Myron W. Crisman said here last night.

Mr. Crisman, assistant pastor of the National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, told young people at the National City Church he felt the union must be achieved on basis of similarities of beliefs and practices.

The two churches have established commissions to study merger possibilities. Such a union would create a church of some 3,200,000 members. Joint projects already are underway, including a cooperative missionary venture in China, and a joint publication of a hymnal and devotional paper.

The assistant pastor cited the two denominations' similar observance of baptism, their independent local churches, and what he termed the preference of each group to express basic Christian beliefs in New Testament language.

In other Sunday religious activities here, the Rev. Thomas A. Fraser of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Alexandria, attacked the "moral legalism" which has prompted some clergymen to urge young men to refuse to be drafted.

Acknowledging that war is evil, Mr. Fraser warned against "a low sort of righteousness" which, he said, "is only an external striving totally unrelated to the conflict of good and evil as nations struggle for their existence."

The Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne., urged a religion geared to life. "Many persons seem to know the language of religion but do not show it in their lives," he said.

At Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico aves. nw., Dr. Edward Gardiner Latch, pastor, said it is not what we do for God, but what we let God do through us that is important.

At Evangelical United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R sts., the Rev. Ira Sankey Ernst, pastor, pointed out that pluck rather than luck makes day dreams come true.

Women Shoppers Urge Reimposing Of Price Controls

Reimposition of price controls and rationing were urged by the League of Women Shoppers, Inc., in telegrams to congressional leaders, Kathleen R. Clift, Washington, vice chairman of the organization, announced yesterday.

The league also demanded: Repeal of taxes and restrictive laws on margarine; strengthening of rent control and passage of the Taft-Wagner-Ellender housing bill; repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act; civil rights legislation including antipoll tax and antilynching bills; increase of the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour; subsidization of industrial and farm products.

Alexandria Police Avert Near-Riot

200 Men Gather As Soldier Is Shot Resisting Arrest After Street Melee

Prompt arrival of Alexandria police reserves was credited yesterday with averting a possible riot following a Saturday night shooting fracas involving two Alexandria patrolmen, a soldier and a civilian.

Maj. Edgar Sims, Alexandria police chief, praised actions of the reserves in maintaining order when a crowd of about 200 men gathered about the policemen awaiting an ambulance to take their critically wounded prisoner to Alexandria Hospital.

No further investigation is deemed necessary in light of the policemen's reports, Chief Sims said.

The soldier victim, Pvt. Eugene Butts, 22, of the Ninety-fourth Engineer Battalion, Fort Belvoir, Va., was shot in the groin. He was in critical condition last night.

The police report stated Butts was shot by Police Pvt. Wilmer Cator while the soldier and a second man tussled with Police Pvt. Charles Baber. The fight followed Baber's arrest of the soldier for investigation of disorderly conduct near Queen and Lafayette sts.

According to a report made by Cator, this is what happened:

Responding to a "trouble call," the two policemen had arrested Butts, but, as he was being placed in a squad car, he broke free and ran into an alley.

Baber pursued, and Cator ran to the other end of the alley.

Baber halted Butts by firing two shots into the air, and was leading him back to the squad car when, at the intersection, a second man struck the policeman.

Cator, arriving at the scene and finding the two men pummeling Baber, tried to break up the tussle, striking Butts over the head with his pistol butt. The soldier grabbed Baber's pistol, attempting to wrest it from its holster.

It was then, Cator said, that he fired.

While awaiting the ambulance, Baber arrested Joseph Hunt, 20, of 720 Gibbon st., Alexandria, and identified him as the other man who had attacked him.

Before the crowd was dispersed, another man, Robert J. Moore, 19, of 204 Princess st., was arrested on a charge of obstructing justice.

It's New Jive

Be-Bop Seen Reigning on Dance Floor

The coming thing on the American dance floor is "be-bop," a new brand of jive with a beat that no one has been able to track down so far.

That's the prediction of Franklyn Oakley, past president of the Dancing Masters of America. He is one of 400 teachers of ballet, tap, ballroom, and modern dance who will polish up their steps and compare notes at the normal school and convention opening today at the Shoreham.

"The Lindy hop is as dead as a doornail," Oakley claims, and the be-bop stuff is all the rage with the younger set in New York, where he hails from.

Oakley feels it's his duty to work out some official steps to the new jive which dancers have been improving, but he's been stymied so far because be-bop musicians accent a different beat in every bar of music.

"Everybody is sort of on his own," he says sadly; "and the melody just isn't there."

The Dancing Masters of America, coming from all parts of the United States, Canada, Hawaii, Trinidad, the Philippines and Mexico, will open their annual convention next Sunday, following a week given over to the normal school. The convention closes August 7.

Three Youths With Arsenal in Automobile Taken on Robbery Charge by Alert Police

Shotguns, Rifles Revolver, Pistol Ammunition Found

Three Maryland youths in a stolen car, with enough arms and ammunition to hold off a posse, surrendered early yesterday to observant Arlington County policemen.

Cached in the rear of the new Oldsmobile sedan, police said, were three shotguns, three rifles, a revolver and an automatic pistol, as well as 16 boxes of shotgun ammunition and a large number of clips of rifle bullets.

The youths were turned over to Montgomery County (Md.) police, charged with looting the home of Donal L. Chamberlin, 205 Highland dr., Kenwood, Md., real estate developer, Saturday night. The guns were used in hunting and target practice, Chamberlin said.

Police identified the three prisoners as Henry Silva, 19, 4511 Stanford st., Chevy Chase; Fletcher Folden, 19, 7024 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, and John Safford, 18, 116 Everett st., Kensington View.

All were remanded to Rockville jail pending release on $5000 bond each on the burglary charge. Preliminary hearing date was set for August 9 in Bethesda police court.

Arlington County Policemen Russell Petty and Arthur Brown said they saw the three seated in the car parked at a closed gasoline station near Arlington County Courthouse at 3:30 a. m. yesterday.

When the driver was unable to produce identification cards, the car and occupants were taken to Arlington police station for investigation. Police said they later found out the automobile was stolen Saturday night from Paul Brothers, Inc., auto dealers at 5220 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Also found in the automobile were a small radio, clothing and two watches later identified as among articles stolen from the Chamberlin home. Total value of the stolen articles was set by police at $1000.

900 Guardsmen Leave for Camp By Train, Truck

After a night of feverish preparation, more than 900 D. C. National Guardsmen rolled out of Washington early yesterday for two weeks' training at Camp Pendleton, Va.

For an estimated 70 per cent of the troops, it was their first taste of military life. The rest are veterans of wartime military service.

Some 400 members of the contingent departed at 7 a. m. by troop train on the 270-mile journey, under command of Col. Charles Yech, jr.

Other troops left between 6 and 7 a. m. in 100-odd vehicles, mostly 2½-ton trucks, for an estimated 11-hour journey.

Takoma Park to Have Band Concert Series

A series of free band concerts, sponsored by the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce, will begin Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the park at Carroll and Willow aves. in Takoma Park.

Tuesday's concert will be given by the 35-piece Washington Gas Light Co. band under direction of Toby Tyler.

Service Groups Plan Dances Wednesday

The special services at Andrews Air Force base and Bolling Air Force base will each hold an open air dance Wednesday night, and the Recreation and Welfare Service of Navy Quarters K will hold a dance in the Navy annex gymnasium that evening.

2 Drownings Reported In Maryland

Kansas City Visitor Is One of Victims; Other Unidentified

Two persons were drowned in separate water tragedies yesterday near Annapolis, Md., police reported last night.

One victim was identified as C. W. Alexander, jr., 18, of Kansas City, Mo., a visitor at the home of W. M. Lingley, 203 South Oak st., Falls Church, Va. Witnesses said he went under while swimming in 15 feet of water of the Severn River at Herald Harbor Park, near Annapolis.

The mishap occurred at 4:50 p. m. His inert body was quickly recovered and rescue workers applied artificial resuscitation for two hours before he was officially pronounced dead shortly before 7 p. m. The body was taken to the Taylor funeral home in Annapolis.

The second drowning occurred when two Annapolis youth sank with their motor scow in the Severn River just off Winchester, near Annapolis, Maryland State police said. One of the two was picked up but police dragged the river for the second.

The second drowning occurred shortly before 9 p. m.

The survivor was identified as Thomas Stinchcomb, 20, of Annapolis, Md. Police said their boat, out of gas, was being towed by a larger boat when the front end dipped under water. Stinchcomb, at Emergency Hospital in Annapolis, was reported suffering from shock and unable to talk.

Name of the drowned youth, whose body had not been recovered at midnight, was withheld pending verification.

Postlude

Season's Top Reached at Watergate

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell's all-Tschaikowsky program at the Watergate last night was the finest orchestral playing of the summer season to date.

With Ruth Diehl and James Pease as soloists in excerpts from the opera, "Eugen Onegin," the concert had both novel and familiar scores, including Romeo and Juliet, the 1812 Overture, and music from the Nutcracker Suite.

The qualities which made Mitchell's Tschaikowsky so exciting are precisely those which cause people to cheer Arturo Toscanini's conducting of the same composer. They include impeccable regard for the composer's tempo indications, pellucid phrasing and sentiment without undue schmaltz.

Romeo and Juliet has not excited me as it did last night except in a historic performance by Serge Koussevitsky. There was the cello phrasing in the first street fight, the tenderness of the violins in their entrance immediately after; there was the woodwind choir sounding superbly organ-like, and the brass, led by Geisler's triumpet at the climax of the second family brawl. Sonorous, pulsing with love and hate from Montague and Capulet, it was a thrilling job.

Excitement piled on excitement when the opera music came along. The audience knew the Polonaise and Waltz, but few had heard the Letter Scene, Onegin's aria, and the closing duet of the opera. Ruth Diehl far outshone the Metropolitan opera star who sang the scene at the first concert of the National Symphony last October. Her voice was by turns warm and pleading and dramatic in denunciation.

Diction, phrasing, but above all, style and splendid assurance in the part made her singing truly moving. James Pease found Onegin's testitura a bit too high for his heavy voice, but managed in spite of it. His first aria is an ungrateful bit, but in the duet which closes the opera, he caught some of Miss Diehl's fire and rose to more impassioned moments.

Again Howard Mitchell proved himself, as in the Romeo, the master of the Tschaikowsky idiom. With perfect musicianship, he moved the orchestra in spontaneous support of the singing. Next year how about more opera in concert form?

The Nutcracker excerpts and the thunder of the 1812 Overture were equal in brilliance to what had gone before. The huge crowd shouted its approval of fine conducting and drew the Sleeping Beauty Waltz for an encore.

Wednesday: next to the last concert of the season: Claudio Arrau playing Beethoven's Emperor concerto, with Brahms' first symphony, and the Third Brandenburg concerto of Bach. The way Mitchell is conducting, you'd better get your tickets early.

Watergate Music Backers Thanked

The thanks of the community to the underwriters who subscribed $15,000 for the Watergate symphony concerts were expressed last night by Maurice B. Mitchell, general manager of WTOP, speaking over the station during the intermission.

Mitchell said the summertime "tradition of music" at the Watergate was rescued at the very last moment by a group of "public-spirited Washington business organizations whose only motive was a splendid pride in the community in which they live and do business."

Two District Women Die In Maryland Car Crashes

Eleven Others Hurt, Three Seriously, In Automobile Accidents in D. C.

Two Washington women were killed yesterday in Maryland traffic, one in St. Marys County and the other on Washington-Baltimore blvd. a half-mile north of Savage.

The dead:

Miss Earline Nelson, 23, of 1717 T st. nw., killed almost instantly in a head-on collison about 10:30 p. m. on a curve of the Washington-Baltimore blvd.

Hildegarde Sturger, 924 24th st. nw., who died at 2:45 p. m., four hours after her skull was fractured in a collision between the 1947 Cadillac in which she was riding and a civilian jeep.

The Cadillac, going west and operated by William S. Harley, also of 924 24th st. nw., sideswiped the jeep traveling east, driven by Parran A. Howe of Clements, Md., on Route 242 a few hundred yards from Morganza, Md.

The Cadillac then lurched off the highway, crashing into a cluster of trees that lined the roadway. Neither Harley nor Howe were injured. The jeep was only slightly damaged.

Harley was held by Maryland State Police, charged with manslaughter and reckless driving.

Maryland State Trooper R. J. Powley, who investigated the Washington-Baltimore blvd. crash, said Miss Nelson was riding in the front seat of a car driven by E. E. Hines, 22, of 229 K st. ne.

The car, he said, failed to make the curve, swerved across the highway and struck a car driven by Thomas K. Hall, 30, of Fairfield, Md. None of the other occupants of the two cars was injured.

The Hines vehicle, Powley said, overturned on Miss Nelson who was thrown partially out of the car.

In the District, John F. Cratsley, 23, a mechanic of 616 7th st. ne., suffered a possible skull fracture when his car crashed into a tree at 6th st. and Missouri ave. nw. Police said he apparently fell asleep at the wheel. He was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital.

Robert L. Easton, 28, of 5718 13th st. nw., was admitted to Garfield Hospital with a possible skull fracture received when the auto he was driving overturned at New Hampshire and Eastern aves. nw.

Police said he lost control of his car when he tried to avoid striking two other cars that had collided. The other autos were operated by Capt. Z. O. Law, a member of the District Fire Department, who lives at 4905 Erie st., Berwyn, Md., and Edgar F. Bunbocher, 31, of Gaithersburg, Md., police said. Mrs. Jackie S. Law, 24, Captain Law's daughter-in-law, was treated at Garfield Hospital for a slight head injury and released.

Richard E. Tobin, 44, of 3053 S. Abingdon st., Arlington, Va., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture after the auto he was driving collided at 11th and E sts. sw. with an auto operated by Paul R. Jaeck, 21, of 6616 Delafield st., Chevy Chase, Md., police said.

Three passengers in Tobin's car, Agnes Tobin, 41, of the Abingdon st. address, and John and Helen Van Allman of Scarsdale, N. Y., were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises and released.

Four Hurt Here As Car Hits Wall

Four persons were injured yesterday about 11:30 p. m., when the car in which they were riding crashed into a brick wall and cement steps in front of 417 Farragut st. nw.

Admitted to Casualty Hospital where they were taken by Fire Department ambulance were Katherine Christakos, 42, of 410 Farragut st. nw., in fair condition, and Bessie Courtis, 25, of 1511 Allison st. nw., also described as in fair condition.

Hospital officials said George Christakos and Stella Clainos, 60, both of the Farragut st. nw. address, were released.

Tired Father's Idea

Airport Plane Watchers Sit Down Now

Stands Seating 1100 Take Weight Off Visitors' Feet

The latest thing at Washington National Airport—outdoor observation stands—came into being because two well-known facts occurred simultaneously to a young Alexandria salesman.

Fact No. 1: Kids soon become squirming lumps of muscle-straining weight when you have to pack them under your arm or hold them aloft "to see."

Fact No. 2: It is better to sit down than stand up when you're watching any length of time as aircraft land and take off.

The Alexandrian, who prefers to remain anonymous, took his wife and two children to the airport one day in May. His offspring, he says, are "plane crazy." He became weary of holding them. "Why not a place to sit down?" he asked his wife.

That did it.

He found a partner, formed the "Coda Company." They talked with airport officials, made a deal. The company would erect the stands, the airport would take a small rental. Work was completed in June.

He and his partner sunk a tidy sum into the enterprise. The stands, capable of seating 1100 persons, are 175 feet long, ten rows high, are in four tiers. They are located just off the parking lot about 100 yards north of the terminal.

And next week, to permit their plane-crazy kids and a lot of others to enjoy themselves even more, the partners will install a short-wave radio, with three or four loudspeakers, in the stands.

Then, the idea men say, they can hear pilots talk with the control tower when they're coming in, or taking off. Kids eat it up, he says. To say nothing of adults.

The Washington Post

People watch planes at National Airport from "bleachers" costing 10 cents apiece

Most people like to watch the airplanes in the evening, according to the Alexandrian, when the day's heat is gone. Many of them bring their lunches and watch for a couple of hours at a time, moving around as they like.

To get its investment back, the company charges a 10-cent admission for grownups, nothing for children under 8 years of age.

The Alexandrian, who thinks his stands are the first in the country for an airport, calls using them "a good way to spend an evening."

Sitting down, too.

Area News in Brief

Joe Louis Blamed In Traffic Snarl

Joe Louis, who did not appear at Sparrow's Beach, Anne Arundel County, Md., as he was expected to do yesterday, nevertheless caused a traffic jam which had Anne Arundel County police from Eastport and Galesville, Md., working until long after nightfall.

Police reported thousands of motorists and bus riders, who had come mostly from Washington and Baltimore to see the champion, filled the narrow roads leading toward Sparrow's Beach and Carr's Beach in the afternoon.

By evening, when the word was passed that Joe would not be in the area till August 8, that his visit had been postponed, the returning cars and buses mingled with regular Sunday motorists returning from Bay Ridge, Beverley and other beaches in the county. Many were stuck in the resulting jam for hours.

New Eye-Test Device

A new, compact instrument for special eye examination, said to be the only one of its kind in use, has been installed at George Washington University Hospital.

Known as a space eikonometer, it is used to determine whether a patient sees objects larger or smaller with one eye than with the other, and measures the difference. The malady, aniseikonia, is manifested by eye fatigue, dizziness and distorted vision.

Miss Mary Everist Kramer, chief of the hospital's orthoptic department, said the instrument takes up only a small corner of the examination room, in contrast to other apparatus commonly used in the same tests which filled an entire room.

Shooting Victim Rallies

George H. Bostock, 21, a Catholic University student, shot and critically wounded Friday night, was reported slightly improved yesterday at Gallinger Hospital.

Two persons have been arrested as a result of the shooting, Joseph W. Cotter, jr., 58, of 1215 Monroe st. ne., who has been placed under $2000 bond on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, and Cotter's son, Joseph W. Cotter 3d, 34, who has been freed under $500 bond on a simple assault charge.

The shooting occurred in the front yard of the Cotter home. Police said it followed an argument which started originally between George and his brother, William F. Bostock, also a Catholic University student. The brothers live at 1221 Monroe st. ne.

$600 Taken at Grocery

Reuben Halper, proprietor of a grocery store at 29 7th st. ne., reported theft of $600 in cash yesterday. The money was taken, he told police, from a table drawer in the kitchen of his home at 644 A st. se., which adjoins the store.

Another early Sunday housebreaking was reported by Kermit Sidle, 121 C st. se., who told police a thief entered his home and walked out with his trousers, which contained $40 in cash. The trousers were found later in an alley near his home.

Fletcher Is Elected

Frank Fletcher, co-owner of Radio Station WARL, Arlington, yesterday was elected secretary-treasurer of the Virginia Association of Broadcasters.

Other officers chosen in a one-day meeting in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., were John W. New, salesmanager of WTAR, Norfolk, president, and Philip H. Allen of WLVA, Lynchburg, vice president. Incoming President New succeeds E. S. Whitlock of WRNL, Richmond.

New Takoma Numbers

Property owners on Manor Circle in Takoma Park, Md., will get new house numbers August 1. The Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission recently approved a new numbering system after the residents complained that the present one is confusing. Under the new plan 11 houses will carry a 200-block number beginning at 203, formerly one. Even numbers will be on the north side of the circle and odd number on the south.

Founders' Celebration

District of Columbia Recreation Department playgrounds this week will celebrate Joseph Lee Day, commemorating the life and work of the man who founded the national recreation movement.

Playground activities will include picnics, bike rodeos, scavenger hunts, wading pool carnivals and freckles contests.

Joseph Lee is said to have established the first public playground in this country in Boston in 1898. In 1906, the Playground Association of America was founded, with Lee as third vice president.

Holdup Pair Sought

Police last night sought two men after William L. Cook, 37, of 5501 Glenwood rd., Bethesda, reported being robbed of $530 in cash in an alley in the rear of his printing shop at 2110 14th st. nw.

Cook told police the two men approached him from behind late Saturday night as he was about to get into his truck.

One of the men, Cook said, stuck a knife against his right side, declaring, "Don't make a move or I will cut," while the other pressed a hard object in his back and said "This is a gun. Don't make a noise or turn or I'll shoot."

One of the men took his wallet, containing the money, from his hip pocket. They then forced him into his shop, police said he told them. Cook was unable to give descriptions of the holdup men.

F. H. Heaton Dies; Resided Here 40 Years

Heaton

Floyd H. Heaton, 70, a District resident for the past 40 years and former manager of the Alexandria office of the Peoples Life Insurance Co., died Saturday at his home, 3158 Tennyson st. nw.

Mr. Heaton had been in failing health for the past six years. Death was attributed to a lung ailment.

A native of Washington, Va., he was born January 25, 1878, and educated in Virginia public schools. Prior to his marriage to a cousin, the former Miss Laura B. Heaton of Gallatin, Mo., in 1903, he moved to Washington, D. C. After a short period when he lived in Baltimore, Mr. Heaton returned to Washington and became an agent for Peoples Life Insurance Co.

Mr. Heaton was manager of the insurance company's Alexandria branch office from about 1928 until about 1938. After a year's illness in 1939, he returned to Peoples Insurance Co. and worked in the Washington office until his retirement, December 31, 1946.

He was a member of Columbia Lodge No. 3, F.A.A.M.

Besides his wife, Mr. Heaton leaves a son, Forrest F. Heaton, 6804 47th st., Chevy Chase, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Marcus Bruce of Sperryville, Va., and Mrs. Norris Wiley, 5117 V st. se.; a brother, Ralph Heaton of Tacoma, Wash.; a grandson, Forrest Walworth Heaton, and a granddaughter, Miss Sara Franklin Heaton, both of the Chevy Chase, Md., address.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the William Reuben Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda, Md. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery, Falls Church, Va.

50,000 Attend Capital Model Air Show

More than 50,000 persons attended the third annual Capital Model Air Show at Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland yesterday.

Crowds at the daylong show reached their peak about 3 p. m. with 40,000 persons present, officials estimated. The attendance is believed to be at least a local record for model plane shows, officials said.

Arrival of six Royal Air Force Vampire fighter planes on the field early in the afternoon, and passing of the United States Navy's huge 180-passenger transport Constitution, en route to Patuxent Naval Air Station, Md., from California provided extra thrills for the crowds.

James Ripken, 19, of Baltimore, won the senior championship on the basis of points, and Bob Perkins, 17, of Clarksburg, W. Va., the junior championship, in a field of 278 entries.

Don Benson, 18, of San Juan, P. R., received the trophy for the contestant coming from the farthest distance to the show sponsored by the National Airport Club, The Evening Star, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Civil Air Patrol.

Winners by classes were:

1, Gas Free Flight, Class A Senior, Benton Cleveland Hampton, Va.; 2, Class B, Senior, Jack Risken; Class C-D, Senior, A. J. Fleishman, jr., Baltimore.

3, Gas Free Flight, Class A, Junior—Herbert Danick, 1232 Orren st. ne.; 5, Class B, James G. Cotton, Baltimore; 6, Class C-D, Preston Cook, Suitland, Va.

7, Control Line, Class A-B, Senior—William M. Whitehurst, Richmond, Va.; 8, Class C, Charles Eichelberger, Hampton, Va.; 9, Class D, Robert Schode, Hampton, Va.

13, Rubber Power Free Flight Junior—Bob Perkins, Clarksburg, W. Va.; 14, Tow Line Glider, Junior—Robert Peter, Elkins, W. Va.; 15, Odd Free Flight, Junior—Gerald E. Weir, Burke, Va.

16, Jet Control Line, Open—Harry Mordhorst, 2800 Central ave., Alexandria, Va.; 17, Aerobatic, Open—Henry W. Spielman, Jr., Baltimore; 18, Scale Model, Open—Robert H. Evans, Baltimore.

The following six contestants will be sent to the second International Model Air Show in Detroit, August 18-23, by the Plymouth dealers of Metropolitan Washington, it was announced: Harry Mordhorst, Roger Barron, Springfield, Va.; Herbert Danick, Richard Norford, Sam Borr, 8506 Georgetown rd., Bethesda, Md., and A. L. Jones.

Civil Air Patrol prizes were awarded Richard F. Norford, Dutton G. Stoy, Falls Church, Va.; Billy Hinman, Falls Church, Va.; Edwin Andrews, RFD 2, Box 163, Alexandria, Va.

Amputee's Vegetable Patch Cuts Food Bills $10 a Week

Leroy Clem and son Carl hand Mrs. Clem fresh vegetables from their small garden The Washington Post

It once was that a man planted his garden with the hopes of reaping no more than some good exercise, a coat of tan and a smattering of marble-sized radishes.

He figured his home-grown vegetables cost a bit more, but that didn't matter.

It does matter now—with food prices going out of sight. And now, if you have the proverbial green thumb, you can save money by planting your own garden.

An apostle of this you-can-cut-your-cost-of-living theory is Leroy S. Clem, a 25-year-old Army veteran, who lives in the Sleepy Hollow subdivision just outside Falls Church, Va.

Is An Amputee

Clem, raised on a West Virginia farm, lost a leg in Italy during the war and now works for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in Alexandria.

During his convalescene in Washington, Clem met his 24-year-old wife, Eloise. They moved to their new rambler-type home on a three-quarter acre lot last February. Mrs. Clem's father, Carl Trometre, lives with them. They have a 3-year-old son, Carl.

Last spring, the Clems decided to plant a garden to shave something off their $25 a week grocery bills. They planted most of a 50-by-100 foot lot, and Clem says now, even before the whole garden has started producing, they are saving $10 a week.

They get all their food from the garden except meat, dairy products and staples. Clem, who does most of the gardening despite an artificial leg, planted at intervals of two or three weeks to maintain a regular flow of food. He swaps vegetables with neighboring gardeners to add to the variety.

Canning Will Help

Mrs. Clem plans to can about 150 quarts of beans, tomatoes and corn, enough to carry them through the winter, which will mean the real saving. The two or three bushels of potatoes that they expect also will last most of the winter.

Clem licks his lack of space by planting pole beans around the base of his corn stalks and setting out tomato plants in his onion patch. The onions will be gone before the tomatoes spread.

It's a family project. Everyone chips in, including little Carl who was so interested in the first tomatoes that he picked eight little green ones to show his mother.

Colonel Huddleston and Son To Be Reburied in Arlington

Col. Jarrett M. Huddleston, 50, and his eldest son, Lieut. J. M. Huddleston, 24, both killed in action during World War II, will be reburied in a single plot at Arlington Cemetery in services at 9 a. m. today.

Colonel Huddleston died on the Anzio beach on February 9, 1944.

Col. Huddleston while serving as a surgeon with the 5th Army. He had been in the Army Medical Corps since 1917.

Lt. Huddleston

His son, Lieutenant Huddleston, jr., was killed not quite a year later on January 13, 1945, with the 106th Infantry Division during the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium.

Colonel Huddleston, born in Washington, was graduated from McKinley High School and George Washington University Medical School. He was a resident physician at Children's Hospital here before joining the Army during the First World War, when he was regimental surgeon with the First Engineers, First Division.

From 1933 to 1937, Colonel Huddleston was professor of military science and tactics at George Washington University. He was awarded the Legion of Merit posthumously.

Lieutenant Huddleston, born in Germany, where his father was a member of the occupation forces after the First World War, was a graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School here, and of West Point in 1943.

Surviving are Mrs. Helen Huddleston, widow of Colonel Huddleston, who lives at 3501 Idaho ave. nw., a sister of Colonel Huddleston, Mrs. E. C. Bachschmid of Washington, and two other sons, Capt. James M. Huddleston, now in Germany, and Lieut. Thomas M. Huddleston, now in Korea.

Services Due Today For Lieut. P. G. Mitchell

Reburial services for First Lieut. Paul G. Mitchell, fighter pilot killed in North Africa on August 11, 1943, will be held today at 2 p. m. in Arlington Cemetery.

Mitchell

Lieut. Mitchell, one of the first group of college students to enroll in the Civil Aeronautics Administration's flying program in 1940, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Mitchell, 744 Howard rd. se.

Born in the District, Lieutenant Mitchell was a graduate of Cardoza High School and Hampton Institute. He enlisted in the Army in November, 1941, and was commissioned the following year.

Besides his parents, he leaves a sister, Harriett Mitchell, and a brother, Howard Mitchell, both of the Howard rd. address.

Barrett Invites Adult Inspection of Boys Club Camp

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett has issued an invitation to adult members of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, who joined during the club's annual drive, to inspect the club's summer camp.

Camp Ernest W. Brown at Scotland, Md., will be open to adult members Sunday, August 8, and also Sunday, August 15, between 1 and 7 p. m.

The adult members will have opportunity to see the camp in operation and just how their membership fees are being spent.

Those who intend to visit the camp on either of these dates are requested to mail a postcard to Major Barrett at police headquarters, including their name, the date of expected visit and the approximate time.

The camp, approximately 84 miles from Washington, may be reached by the 11th st. bridge, turning left on Good Hope rd. and following Route 5 through TB to Waldorf, Md., and then turning left, continuing on new Route 5 past the Patuxent Naval Air Station, then right to Great Mills. One mile from Crest Mills, a sign indicates the camp.

Green Hopes Need Of People Will Govern Congress

A hope that the special session of Congress will not "try to make political capital" out of national issues was voiced last night by Senator Green (D., R. I.)

Speaking on the "Meet Your Congress" program over radio station WINX, Green said the job of Congress is "to do what we can to help the people of this country. They are in dire straits."

Others in the panel discussion were Senators Knowland (R., Calif.); Sparkman (D., Ala.), and Watkins (R., Utah.)

Knowland said he thought the President might ask an "OPA type" of price control. "I have never believed this type of control would work, unless the Administration is prepared to control all the factors that go into making up the price situation," said Green.

Dennis Mahoney

New York, July 25 (U.P.)—Dennis Mahoney, 58, veteran New York detective and president of the Detectives Endowment Association, died today.

W. P. Jacobs, Publisher, of S. C., Dies Here

Dr. William P. Jacobs, 54, publisher, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association and a former vice president of the American Lawn Tennis Association, died in Doctors Hospital yesterday after a nine-day illness.

Dr. Jacobs, who was a former president of the Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., was stricken with a heart ailment July 16 while on a business trip here. His home was in Clinton.

In 1936 Dr. Jacobs was a presidential elector from South Carolina. During the war, he served as a consultant to the Army Quartermaster Corps and was chairman of the Commission on Physical Fitness in Industry.

A former president of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association, Dr. Jacobs was an avid follower of other sports as well and was the donor of the Jacobs football blocking trophies.

He was president of Jacobs Press and of Jacobs sport magazines—including Sportfolio, American Lawn Tennis and Aim.

His clubs included the Congressional Country Club and the National Press Club.

Among his writings were "Problems of the Cotton Manufacturer," "The Pioneers" and "Tennis, Builder of Citizenship."

With him when he died at 12:30 p. m. were his wife and his two sons, William Plumer Jacobs, jr., and Hugh Shockley Jacobs, who had been staying at the Mayflower Hotel.

Burial services will be in Clinton Tuesday.

Reburial Rites Set Today for Gen. Don Pratt

Graveside reburial services for Brig. Gen. Don Forrester Pratt, 51, killed in action at Normandy in a glider crash on D-Day, will be held today at 11 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery.

General Pratt was Assistant Division Commander of the 101st Airborne at the time of his death June 6, 1944.

Born in Brookfield, Miss., and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, General Pratt entered the Regular Army in August, 1917 as a second lieutenant in the infantry.

He was stationed with the 15th Infantry Division in China from 1932 to 1934, and in 1941 was ade Chief of Staff of the 43d Infantry Division, Camp Blanding, Florida. He was assigned to the 101st Airborne in August, 1942.

Wallace Her Man Mrs. Gimbel Says At Convention

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—No tickets were picked up at Convention Hall but Wallaceites paid up to $2.35 for seats at the Progressive Party's evening jamboree at Shibe Baseball Arena. No pickets lockstepped outside Convention Hall; instead of elephants or donkeys gadgets, lobby peddlers traded big in copies of "people's songs" which were sung during sessions. Party pamphlets were dished out at bunting-hung booths incongruously at center door; a fancily framed oil portrait of Henry Wallace was set on an easel. Sole convention casualty was a sedate poster, plastered every few yards on lobby walls, proclaiming, "For unbiased political news read the New York Times"—on each ad some imp had snipped out the syllable "un." Backing the speakers' platform was a big banner, "Let Us Make a Better America —Henry Wallace."

Trying to make their variety of a better America was thousands of remarkably orderly young and youngish middle-agers whose convention manners were a good cut above Republican and Democratic convention incumbents. Behind the platform a teenage orchestra was installed. In rows once occupied by important Republicans and Democrats sat a chorus of young boys and girls, white blouse, green scarfed. To relieve oratory monotony between speeches a banjoist-guitarist-harmonica player stepped to the mike and led the audience in catchy, ridiculously worded songs. Delegate antics were impromptu. West Virginians' heads were topped with plastic miners' helmets; Idahoans, both white and black, wore cowboy hats, carried outsize cardboard potatoes printed with the slogan, "An Idaho Potato in Every Oven—Wallace and Taylor in the White House."

Signs Show Ingenuity

THE BOYS AND GIRLS from Iowa struggled with 10-feet-high stalks of Wallace corn grown, we were told, by a farmer who personally dislikes the third party candidate. A crowd turned by from Brooklyn, unfurled a sign, declared themselves the fiftieth State (Alaska's the forty-ninth, they explained). They were all members of the Kings County American Labor Party. Signs weaving around the hall showed considerable literary ingenuity. Gayest was "Rocking chair's ready, piano's in tune, send us back our Harry—Independence, Mo. for Wallace."

Sole internationally flavored sign went, "Americans of America want Turkish occupied American territory returned to Armenia." Up on the platform the Progressive Party's important ladies were in evidence—unsmiling Mrs. Jo Davidson, wife of the bearded sculptor, in one of the few hats seen—a beflowered green straw numero—Mrs. Elinor Gimbel in plain gingham, Mrs. C. B. Baldwin, wife of the Progressive Party's campaign manager, who as Lillian Traugott skipped about wartime Europe with OSS. Sartorially neither Republican nor Democratic conventions were much treat, but the Progressive gals hewed to strict fashion line—highlighted were peasant blouses, often of broderie anglaise cotton—almost ankle length skirts with ruffled hems—wedgies or very open sandals worn without benefit of toe enamel—lots of gold kid sandals worn with bobby sox—dozens of shirred elastic topless dresses—hair worn shoulder length, hatless except for a scant handful who wore giant straw canotiers trimmed with floral arrangements and occasionally flowers tucked more or less carelessly behind the ear—the older element went in for gaily printed rayons, bandannas and ribbons tethered coiffures.

Why Women Want Wallace

INTERESTING TO discover why women wanted Wallace. We lifted conventionwards a young member of the platform committee who'd been working until 7 a. m. that morning. Pretty carefully made up, neatly dressed, of obvious Middle East origin, she said, "I think the threat of war is the most immediate thing nowadays. And Henry Wallace with his connections can keep us out of it. President Roosevelt held out some optimism, this administration doesn't." We asked about Russia. "I think Russia's only guarding her borders, she hasn't stepped into other countries except ideologically." When we demurred a bit she continued, "what Russia's doing is nothing compared to United States imperialism—we have troops in China, in Greece—well, at least we have officers training Greek reactionaries, then, of course, look at George Polk." She believed, too, that Wallace could stop depression by nationalizing industry, controlling materials. Mrs. Elinor Gimbel who heads "Women for Wallace," and is very rich, indeed, got into the movement Pearl Harbor Day. By sheer accident, she had called a meeting to set up child care nurseries for working mothers when war came. In 1944, she helped organize women to reelect Roosevelt, kept them together in post-election days as citizen action committees. Mrs. Gimbel thinks Wallace is the only one who understands what political and civic protection women need.

The most unusual convention sidelight was the open house kept in two hotel rooms by members of the Stern gang, Palestine underground fighters who since partition are out in the open as a legal political party. Their underground tales top all others, our journalistic ally, amazing because the 5000 fighters published a secret newspaper daily since 1940.

Mrs. Cowell Exercises Woman's Prerogative; Will Fly to China

By Marie McNair

WHEN Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell was launching in the Mayflower Lounge last Wednesday, she had her passport, her visas, and luggage all packed, ready to take off that day for China.

But—she changed her mind and Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador with whom she was to make the trip left on the plane without her.

It's a woman's prerogative—so goes the old saw—to change her mind. And so—that's just what Margaret Cowell did. She decided to go after all!

Things started buzzing from then on. Mrs. Cowell called Mme. Koo in Shanghai yesterday morning. It was then 11 p. m. Saturday night our time. Yes, Mme. Koo would be delighted if she would come. With her plane reservations canceled, pertinacious Margaret Cowell is at work on getting new ones. If she's unsuccessful she's going to take a chance and hop it across, planning to leave on Thursday.

Yesterday she spent the day at Sunnyside, her country place at Warrenton, Va. She'll go back to New York this week to gather up loose ends and will return to Washington to start her journey from here.

Mme. Koo is in Shanghai for the wedding of her son, Freeman Koo which takes place August 7. Margaret Cowell is trusting to luck she'll get there in time.

ANIA DORFMAN, world famous pianist, and Mrs. Martin Vogel have keot up a friendship over a period of a score of years. The artist, whose name is pronounced—Ahnya—is leaving today for New York after a visit to her old friend here.

Saturday night Lillie Vogel entertained at a small supper party on the terrace for Mme. Dorfman and Mrs. Loy Henderson, whose husband is going to India as our next Ambassador. Elise Henderson is busy getting clothes to take out to Delhi with her. She's concentrating on garden party frocks with long full skirts, wide brimmed hats and—of all things—parasols! Seems it's regulation in India to carry a parasol, preferably to match your frock.

The Italian Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani, was there and Gen. and Mrs. Edward Powers who had been first to Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall's reception. Some of the others enjoying a delicious supper out under the stars were Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams—she's Mrs. Vogel's niece; Mrs. John Steelman and Mrs. Frederick Witt, both without husbands for the evening, and Ralph Totten, once our Minister to South Africa.

Mrs. H. J. Stahl And Daughter To Visit Ranch

Miss Claire Stahl will leave shortly to visit friends in North Carolina for about two weeks, and will then join her mother, Mrs. Harold John Stahl, in Wytheville, Va. Later Mrs. Stahl and her daughter will leave to spend the remainder of the summer at the Stahl ranch in Mosca, Colo. They will return to Washington in time for Miss Stahl to resume her studies this fall.

Mrs. Stahl and her daughter entertained at a garden tea on Friday at the home of Lieut. Comdr. Leslie C. Maurer, Lieut. Comdr. William S. Brown and Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Illing, who share a house in Georgetown.

Among the guests were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. H. K. Loughry, Justice Richmond B. Keech, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Bartelt, Capt. and Mrs. Allen I. Price, Dr. Francis Threadgill, Col. Tilden P. Wright, Comdr. and Mrs. Gardiner Luce, Miss Dawn Fahrney, Miss Nancy Roland Brand, Miss Betsy Wells, Harvey Dove, Robert C. Jones, Clark P. Cole 2d, Jack Van Deventer, Miss Mary Stuart Price, Gallatin de Knox, Graeme Smallwood, Miss Eileen Murphy, Miss Bessie McKee, Miss Marjory Eaton, Capt. William Fountain and Miss Mary Evans.

There are only 2 "Best Ways" to color margarine

1. Right in the churn it's made in!

This is the method used when butter is colored. This is the way yellow Nucoa is colored for states where its sale is not forbidden.* This is the way we hope the law will soon permit all margarine to be colored—at no extra cost to you!

2. By NUCOA'S "Bowl Mix"

Because Nucoa's "Bowl Mix" protects the fine quality, taste, and texture that make Nucoa America's favorite margarine! No halfway measures are tolerated in the making of Nucoa. Appetizingly churned, chilled, made into pounds, and triple-wrapped, Nucoa comes to you with the finest churn-fresh flavor, the smoothest churn-fresh texture any spread can have. It is not melted and poured into a trick coloring package, for we do not believe you would want us to impair the flavor and texture of delicious Nucoa this way. So, until the law frees us to give you yellow Nucoa, you, we think, will want to continue to color it for your table by the nicer "bowl mix" method.

Because it's as quick as any way—test it! Here's the quick, easy, appetizing way to color margarine: Let Nucoa stand at room temperature until it is soft—not soupy, but soft enough for quick sandwich spreading. Remove it from the package to a large bowl and with a large fork or spoon cream in the coloring shaken from the pure color wafer. It takes less than a minute and a half to mix the color in evenly—and no other method is quicker than this; no other method so well protects the texture.

Because it brings you the best margarine—cheaper! When you buy margarine in a trick coloring package, you pay extra for the package. When you buy Nucoa you buy its finer flavor, its year-round, churn-fresh goodness, its rich food energy and dependable Vitamin A. You get the best margarine—the margarine you're proudest to put on your table—actually cheaper!

* Obtainable yellow (where not prohibited by state law) at a higher cost, to cover high Federal taxes and license fees.

NUCOA America's Most Popular Margarine

About Blackberry Stains

I have a new pink linen dress on which I got a blackberry stain. Can you tell me how this stain can be removed? L. P.

Stretch the stained area over bowl and pour boiling water onto it from a tea kettle, holding it at a height of from 12 to 18 inches above the bowl. The force of the stream of water as well as the temperature should remove the stain. If the stain is lightened but not completely removed, continue pouring the boiling water. If it still remains, work glycerine or one of the soapless shampoos into it and rub lightly between the hands. Let stand an hour or so and rinse thoroughly.

I have some new chairs of light-colored solid oak. I wish to use them with a walnut dining table. Is there any way I can darken them, without doing a complete refinishing job? E. C. M.

Going over the chairs with a walnut varnish stain would darken them. Before applying the varnish stain, be sure the surface is smooth and free from soil and grease. Sand rough spots and wipe the entire surface with turpentine to remove any surface soil. It may be that one coat of varnish stain will darken them. If not, apply two coats, allowing the first to dry thoroughly in a dust free room before applying the next. Rubbing the surface with powdered pumice stone and linseed or similar oil after it dries will give it a mellower, softer shine.

I'm expecting a baby in a few months. Neighbors, who I know slightly, might drop in to call on the new arrival. Is it necessary to offer refreshments; if so, what type? M. F. B.

It isn't necessary, but it is a very nice friendly gesture to offer refreshments to casual callers. A cooling drink such as lemonade if in warm weather, or to save work, you might serve gingerale or some other popular bottled beverage. If the day is brisk, a freshly brewed cup of tea or coffee would be appreciated. With it serve a cookie or a piece of cake. Or, if the caller should find you without either, cinnamon toast made quickly while the kettle boils, would go well with the tea or coffee. With the cool drink, you could serve cookies or not, as you wish.

Will you tell me how to clean a light colored upholstered chair? H. M.

If the upholstery in the chair is washable, you can clean it by shampooing. Make a soap jelly by dissolving one cup mild soap flakes in two cups water. Make plenty, for you clean entirely with the suds. When cool and jelled, whip the jelly into a froth with an egg beater. Apply the suds to the chair with a brush, working with a circular motion over an area a foot in diameter. Continue applying clean suds until the upholstery is clean. Then wipe away soap and sponge area thoroughly with a cloth wrung out of clear water.

The success of the job depends almost entirely upon how thoroughly the soiled soap is rinsed from the upholstery—so change the rinse water frequently, but be sure not to use so much water in rinsing that the padding under the upholstery becomes soaked. When this small area is washed and rinsed proceed to the next, overlapping edges so there is not a soiled line between. When the piece is washed, set out of doors to dry or turn an electric fan on it indoors to hasten the drying.

If the upholstery fabric is not washable, it would be wisest to turn the cleaning over to a professional.

Is it proper for the bridegroom and men participants of a morning church wedding to wear either tuxedos or white dinner coats (with dark trousers)? This wedding is to be a small, but formal affair in a very small town where formal clothes are seldom if ever worn. Or, would it be all right for the men to wear gray suits instead of the traditional dark blue, in case they decide to wear business suits, and would they need to be double-breasted? What kind of ties would be most suitable? The bride will be attired in white satin, finger-tip veil, and train. There will be only one maid and the father will give the bride away. Is it absolutely necessary for him to dress the same as the bridegroom and best man? E. M. P.

The white coat with dark trousers would be very appropriate, but not the tuxedos in daytime. I am told by the bridal counselor in a large Washington department store that the gray suits would be inappropriate, but that any type of dark suit could be worn. Or the attendants could appear in all white, summer-type suits. Choose plain ties in a color to match the boutonniere. You could use a dubonnet tie and boutonniere or blue batchelor buttons for boutonniere and a matching blue tie.

Since the father will give the bride away, he should be dressed the same as the other men in the wedding party.

Could you tell me what vitamin is the antigrayhair vitamin? At the tender age of 19 I find myself with a nice crop of short, gray hairs appearing R. H.

The so-called antigray hair vitamin is one of the factors of the B complex group of vitamins. The name given to this specific factor is panthothenic acid. Research to prove the efficiency of this vitamin in preventing gray hair in humans is still under way.

Now it's doilies that are coming in plastics! The one above was reproduced for an imported, hand-embroidered Madeira applique. It fits in nicely with period furniture, keeps water from the flower vase from marking the table, and can be quickly cleaned with a damp cloth

Miss Ringe is the daughter of Mrs. John Henry Ringe of Washington and the late Colonel Ringe, and her fiance is the son of Mrs. Gertrude J. Bemis of Pasadena, Calif., and Walter S. Bemis of Chicago.

The bride-elect was graduated from Washington Seminary in Atlanta, Ga., and from De Pauw University in Greencastle, Ind. She studied at Traphagen School of Fashion in New York City. Miss Ringe is a member of the Daughters of the United States Army and Kappa Pi National Art Fraternity.

Mr. Bemis was graduated from Yale University, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity. He received his master's degree from the University of Southern California, where he is at present a member of the faculty teaching commercial aviation. During the war he served as a naval aviator.

Mrs. Williams Marries Major

Mrs. Virginia Culley Williams and Maj. E. Scharpe Landry were married at the Fort Myer Chapel July 23, Chaplain Laird officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Carroll T. Culley, sr., of Greenville, Miss., and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Landry of New Orleans, La.

The bride, who wore a pink faille afternoon suit with brown and blue accessories, was given in marriage by her brother, Carroll T. Culley, 2d, of Greenville.

Mrs. M. F. Summerfelt, sister of the bridegroom, attended the bride, and Col. Robert B. Landry, air aide to the President and brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were Lieut. Col. Harold McCormick and Col. M. F. Summerfelt.

Major Landry received his bachelor of laws degree from Louisiana State University before entering on duty with the Signal Corps of the Army. During World War II he served in Africa, Italy and France and is presently on duty in the office of the chief signal officer in Washington.

Following the luncheon after the ceremony, the couple left for a brief motor trip. They will reside in Arlington on their return.

Miss Ann Watkins Becomes Bride

Miss Ann Watkins and Willis Franklin Woods were married July 24 at the bride's home in Friendship Heights, Chevy Chase, Md. The Rev. William F. Creighton of St. John's Episcopal Church of Bethesda officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Marie M. Watkins and the late C. Law Watkins, former assistant director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery. A graduate of Radcliffe College, she is now assistant to the curator of the Index of American Design at the National Gallery of Art.

Mr. Woods, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Woods of Washington and Danville, Vt., is the assistant to the director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. During the war he served as first lieutenant in the 392d Engineer Regiment. Mr. Woods graduated from Brown University and continued his fine arts studies at the University of Oregon and the American University where he was manager of the Watkins Memorial Gallery.

One on the Aisle—

John Mills Stars In Suspense Yarn

By Richard L. Coe

THERE HAVEN'T BEEN any British crime films around town lately, a chink which the Hippodrome now fills with one from Eric Ambler, "The October Man." Though this is too slow moving to be as engrossing as the best of them, it's by no means a negligible effort.

It's neatly put together and expertly played by a fine cast headed by John Mills. This reliable actor drives home the pivotal title role with a steady, sincere performance. And there are a few of those observant touches about lesser characters that frequently distinguish the better British films.

Mills plays a man who is severely injured in a bus accident. He has been taking the small daughter of some friends on an outing; her death in the crash seems to his now shattered mind his fault and he broods over the child's death. In time, however, he is released from the hospital to go back to his job as a chemical researcher.

All would be well for him but for the curious fate of external circumstances. A young woman of shady character, who is his neighbor in a shoddy hotel, is murdered and evidence, plus his own mental illness, points to him as her murderer.

He May Be Guilty

Into his healing mind comes the fact that both his neighbors, his fellow worker and the police suspect he may have done the deed. This jolts him into the frightening suspicion that he might actually have done it. Finally, however, the need to prove to himself and others that his mind has healed leads to one of those chase interludes that suspense fans most enjoy.

Ambler both wrote and produced the story under J. Arthur Rank's plan of assigning projects to individuals and letting them have free hand. With the new British quota system now in effect, one wonders whether Rank will maintain this effective custom or whether, as many on both sides of the Atlantic seem to think, he will be forced to adopt the factory-belt system of movie-making which so reduces the general level of our Hollywood product. Because the British studios have made fewer pictures, they have been able to give a mark of individual attention to their better films; now that they are to aim at quantity of product, one fears the quality will suffer.

Mills is fine as the young man who isn't sure whether he has lost his reason and the supporting cast is notable for several minor players—Catherine Lacey, as an inquisitive hostel keeper; Joyce Cary as a talkative guest, and Esme Beringer as an old dame who feels the cold. Adrianne Allen has a small role and Joan Greenwood is Mills' trusting girl friend.

That title, by the way, has something to do with astrology. Not much to do with it, but heck, you've got to have a title. Even without it, "The October Man" is a generally engrossing, well-made film.

"THE OCTOBER MAN," J. Arthur Rank production, released by Eagle-Lion. Written and produced by Eric Ambler. Directed by Roy Baker. At the Hippodrome.

Fo'c'sle Rout Puts 6 Gobs in Brig; Signorina in Jail

Naples, Italy, July 25 (U.P.)—Black-haired Anna Mangione languished in jail today and six American seamen were in the brig. Their futures were bleak but their memories were warm—of a gay 12-hour party aboard the United States cruiser Fargo which saw Anna romping gleefully around the crews' quarters.

Friday night 20-year-old Anna paddled her skiff as usual in Naples Bay, begging cigarettes from Americans to resell on the black market.

At the Fargo, six American gobs asked her aboard. They tossed her a line and she scrambled on deck. Anna was rushed to the crew's quarters where they dressed her in a sailor suit.

Here, the Italian police report says simply, "During a wild party that night she was overcome with tiredness and fell asleep. She was discovered later by officers on watch."

The six sailors, whom the Navy refuses to identify, are awaiting court-martial.

MARY WORTH

YOU SHOULDN'T STARVE YOURSELF TO SUPPORT YOUR MOTHER AND SISTERS, NIKKI!--THE BREADWINNER SHOULD BE THE BEST FED ONE IN THE FAMILY!--THAT'S JUST COMMON SENSE!
MY MOTHER WENT WITHOUT FOOD TO PAY FOR MY DANCING LESSONS, MRS. WORTH! AND MY TWO KID SISTERS WENT BARE-FOOT IN SUMMER SO I COULD BUY TOE SLIPPERS!
HEY! YOU TALK SWELL COPY!
IF I CAN'T SELL YOU GOONS TO THE PUBLIC ON GLAMOR, MAYBE I CAN SELL YOU ON DRAMMER!--HUMAN INTEREST HOKUM, BABE! LIKE THAT TEAR-YANKER YOU JUST TOLD AUNTIE!

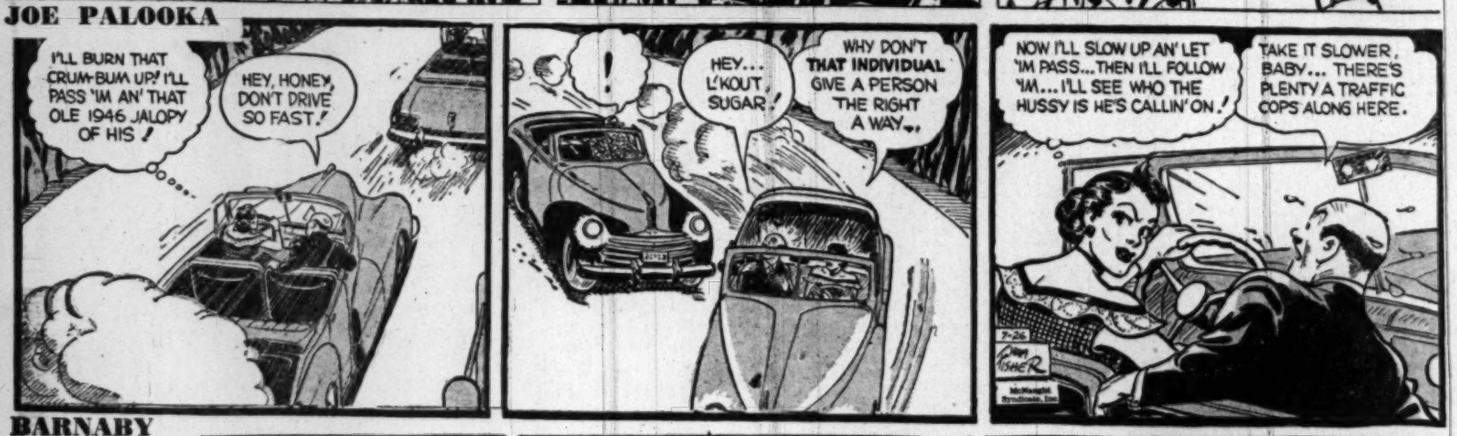
YOU HAVE WITNESSED A PRACTICE DIVE OF THIS SUBMARINE DISGUISED AS A FREIGHTER! WHAT DO YOU THINK, CANYON?
WRAP UP SIX TO GO OUT, SHARKY — I'LL PEDDLE THEM AROUND THE UNITED NATIONS ON CONSIGNMENT!
BUT HOW CAN I TELL MY GRANDCHILDREN WHAT I DID IN THE COLD WAR IF YOU DON'T TIP HAPPY AND ME TO WHY WE'RE HERE?
YOU ARE AN INTELLIGENT AMERICAN— WE WANT YOUR REACTION TO THIS CRAFT!
GLADLY! IT'S A CUTE STUNT THAT COULD RAISE CAIN IN A HARBOR FULL OF SHIPPING AT THE START OF AN UNDECLARED WAR... WHICH IS WHAT I WILL TELL THE U.S. NAVY WHEN I GET TO A RADIO!
BUT, OF COURSE, YOU KNOW YOU ARE NOT GOING TO GET TO A RADIO, DON'T YOU?

JOE PALOOKA



I'LL BURN THAT CRUM-BUM UP! I'LL PASS 'IM AN' THAT OLE 1946 JALOPY OF HIS!
HEY, HONEY, DON'T DRIVE SO FAST!
HEY... L'KOUT, SUGAR!
WHY DON'T THAT INDIVIDUAL GIVE A PERSON THE RIGHT A WAY...
NOW I'LL SLOW UP AN' LET 'IM PASS... THEN I'LL FOLLOW 'IM... I'LL SEE WHO THE HUSSY IS HE'S CALLIN' ON!
TAKE IT SLOWER, BABY... THERE'S PLENTY A TRAFFIC COPS ALONG HERE.

That's Gus!
Gosh! Something HAS happened to him, Mr. O'Malley!

MICKEY FINN

DID I HEAR YOU SAY THAT MICHAEL ISN'T COMIN' IN TODAY, TOM?
THAT'S RIGHT, PHIL! HE WENT OVER TO THE RIVER FRONT—TO HAVE ANOTHER TALK WITH THAT TOUGH KID —RED FEDDER!
I TOLD HIM I DIDN'T WANT HIM TO BOTHER WITH THAT BOY! IT'S ONLY A WASTE OF TIME!
WELL, THAT'S JUST WHAT I SAID TOO, PHIL — BUT HE STILL HOPES TO STRAIGHTEN THE LITTLE MUG OUT!
HUMPH! HOW DOES HE EXPECT TO DO IT — BY HITTING HIM OVER THE HEAD WITH A BAT?
I DON'T KNOW, PHIL— ALL I KNOW IS THAT HE'S GOIN' TO MAKE ONE MORE TRY!

Put Your Name in the Stars!

NEW YORK.—When the officials at Cal. Tech were faced with the problem of financing the construction and operation of its new 200-inch telescope, Tom Beck' of Collier's finally supplied the solution: Mr. Beck reasoned that wealthy men preferred to contribute to funds which would give permanence to their names. He proposed something which would be more permanent than any statue, plaque, building or even a mountain . . . The new telescope should bring about the discovery of three new solar systems. For $500,000 a contributor will have a solar system named after him. For $100,000 a contributor will have one of the 12 new super novas named after him. And he'll have a star named after him for $50,000.

POLITICS: Dorothy Thompson suggested to a friend that Anne O'Hare McCormick become the new Secretary of State. Mrs. McCormick heard of it and said: "No. That's not for me." . . . "If you wish to decline," Mrs. McCormick was told, "you'd better have a statement which is even stronger than General Sherman's." . . . "Very well, I'll make such a statement," said Mrs. McCormick. "If nominated, I'll not accept; if elected, I'll run away."

BOOK DEPT.: Evelyn Waugh's new book, "The Loved One," is a novel about a Hollywood mortician. The publishers were worried about the possibility of a libel suit by a Los Angeles undertaker who might allege that the principal character was patterned after him and that he was clearly identifiable. Waugh assured the publishers that the book was not based on a real person . . . The cautious publishers, nevertheless, held up publication for two months and hired private detectives to check the Los Angeles morticians, and see if any of them could be identified as the character in the book . . . In "The Loved One" reference is made to a parrot owned by the mortician's mother. The detectives checked every undertaker, and established the fact that none of them had a mother who owned a parrot.

NEWS DEPT.: Chester Bowles, the former OPA administrator, has been invited to set up an anti-inflation program in Japan for General MacArthur . . . Merle Miller of Harper's Magazine is writing an article, "The Stillborn Babies of Journalism," about the 101 magazine projects launched since the war, but which never came to life . . . Harold E. Talbott, Dewey's money-raiser, expects to be rewarded with the Ambassadorship to the Court of St. James's . . . Pan American probably will be granted three domestic air routes. Its application and the hearings in Washington resulted in an eight-million word record in 3½ years. The routes are Boston to Houston, Boston to Miami and New York to San Francisco . . . A dozen, rich, influential Democrats met last night at the Westbury home of Michael Straight to map a campaign for the election of a Democratic Congressman in Republican Nassau County, the richest in the world.

FOREIGN DISPATCH: Randolph Churchill parachuted into Yugoslavia during the war and served as liaison with Tito. Two years ago he returned to Belgrade, saw Tito and later wrote a series of columns criticizing the government. . . . A few weeks ago Churchill was in Trieste. He wanted to test the political temperature of Yugoslavia, and he sent a wire to Tito, asking if an appointment could be made for Tuesday or Wednesday. Churchill waited and waited until Tuesday and Wednesday had passed. Then, on Thursday, he received a reply: "Neither day would be convenient.—Tito."

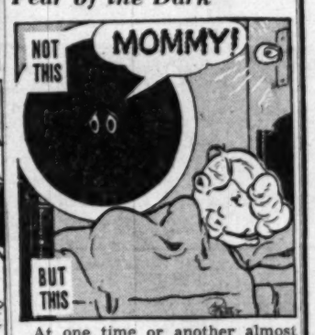
Fear of the Dark



At one time or another almost every young child shows some fear of the dark. It is hard for parents to decide whether to ignore, shame, punish or console when this fear arises.

Some child-guidance people have advised a Spartanlike attitude by saying that the door should be firmly shut and the child left alone no matter how much he calls or cries. Usually, however, these fears are real ones and every effort should be made to help the child overcome them.

One should not hesitate to leave the door open slightly or even keep a low night light on if these methods are reassuring to the child. It is desirable, too, to play some game in the dark such as looking for a ball or some other object in a darkened room. Such games should not be forced, however. The child should be given a sense of being safe, with Mother or Dad right with him as long as he needs them.

If one doesn't make an issue of the matter and gradually helps the child understand that there is nothing to be afraid of, he will usually overcome his fears before long.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Dewey, Warren Ahead of Congress

By Drew Pearson

Pearson

What few people, even inside the Republican Party, fully realize is that the men at the head of the GOP ticket are far ahead of the Republican Congress which meets in special session today.

The real truth is that Dewey and Warren have much more in common with Harry Truman when it comes to domestic legislation than the Republican Party which nominated them.

If there is to be a Republican Administration next January therefore, this special session is the time for the voters to watch their Congressmen. They can go to the polls in November in an effort to give the next administration a workable Congress instead of the present collection of misfits and diehards.

All you have to do is look at the record to see how far ahead of Congress are the two top candidates on the Republican ticket. Here is their record:

Minimum Wages: Dewey—Extended minimum wages to 500,000 retail workers previously not covered by law; also to 320,000 women in hotels, beauty parlors, cleaning establishments. (Truman has repeatedly urged Congress to extend and increase minimum wages, but no result.)

Fair Employment: Dewey—Passed a Fair Employment Bill giving equal working opportunity regardless of race or religion. (This is similar to the Truman FEPC proposal.) When the New York Board of Regents protested against admitting Jews, Negroes and Catholics to New York State universities on the same proportion to the population, Dewey overruled them. He insisted that any religion or race must be admitted to any college in proportion to the population—provided they pass scholastic requirements.

Governor Warren — Urged California Legislature to create a Fair Employment Commission to investigate political and economic inequality of minority groups, but couldn't get it through his Legislature.

Health: Dewey — Pushed State aid for local public health work; launched successful program to have free chest X-rays for tuberculosis. Every TB patient gets free hospital treatment. "Cows get free TB tests," says Dewey. "Why not human beings?"

Warren—Aroused wrath of California medical lobby by urging State-wide health insurance giving prepaid hospital, medical and laboratory care to everyone. (This is the program indorsed by Truman —which makes Senator Taft see red and which most Republicans call "New Deal socialism.") Warren has urged this program at every session of Legislature since 1943.

Housing: Dewey—Built 69 millions dollars of postwar emergency housing, which is three times what the Federal Government has built. This includes 8581 homes for veterans, 1179 apartments, 13,678 dormitories adjacent to colleges. Credit goes to Democratic Governor Lehman for authorizing 300 million dollars for a State housing program, but Dewey has added 135 million dollars to this. (This is the type of housing which GOP leaders in Congress call "socialistic" and have refused to pass.)

Of this so-called "socialistic" housing, Dewey says: "Public housing represents one contribution of government to the basic needs of that portion of the people who are economically unable without such aid to maintain a decent standard of living."

Warren—Got emergency housing appropriation of $7,500,000 to help local communities with public housing, and another two million dollars for rural housing. Also set up revolving fund of one million dollars to buy surplus Federal buildings and building materials for veterans.

Real-Estate Lobby: Dewey and his top housing adviser, Herman T. Stichman, have consistently opposed the real estate lobby (so has Governor Warren), while GOP congressional leaders have eaten out of its hand. Says Stichman: "Certain real estate groups must awaken to the realization that their unyielding opposition to any program of governmental aid to housing families of low income is a direct invitation to the Communists to come in and exploit the resulting discontent . . .

Rent Control: Dewey—Got New York Legislature to pass Rent Control Act when he saw OPA was likely to be killed by a Republican Congress.

Summer Cold

A cold is bad enough to have . . . In winter, spring or fall . . . But when it comes in summertime . . . It is the worst of all . . . Because it seems to take a hold . . . And never go away . . . And all it does is make us sick . . . And interrupt our play . . . It ruins our vacation and . . . Our disposition too . . . And it is just as fatal to . . . The work we have to do . . . A summer cold is something that . . . We do not like to own . . . Because our neighbors are inclined . . . To let us be alone . . . And we are isolated from . . . The flowers and the trees . . . While we remain at home and try . . . All sorts of remedies.

THE UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION · ACT OF JAN 16 1883 · Palmam qui meruit ferat

THIS WEEK THE HECHT CO. SALUTES THE UNITED STATES

Civil Service Commission

and its people who staff the world's largest personnel office

● THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION . . . occupies an historic building which has endured throughout two-thirds of our national history. It is connected by an underground passage to the U. S. Tariff Commission Building across the street . . . one of a number of such tunnels in Washington evidently constructed in our early days as a means of escape in case of attack by foreign enemies.

● THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION . . . has been under the leadership of many distinguished American leaders and public servants. One of the outstanding was Theodore Roosevelt . . . who served from 1889 to 1895 . . . and who became a Commissioner at the age of 31. He exercised as vigorous a leadership in the Civil Service Commission as he later did in the Presidency. His desk . . . located on the second floor of the building . . . has been preserved as a lasting memorial to this great American.

● THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION . . . held its first examinations for public office in 1883 . . . during the administration of President Arthur. During the first six months under the new Civil Service Act, 489 appointments to public office were made. As the years have gone on . . . more and more positions in the government have been put under Civil Service jurisdiction.

● THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION . . . in its present form . . . came into being in 1883, and often serves as a model of Federal personnel administration for foreign countries. In the past few years representatives of the governments of China, Greece, Haiti, Peru and Mexico have studied the Commission's organization and procedures . . . and have taken to their homelands our ideas of a democratic method of selecting a country's workers.

All of the material contained herein has been secured from the U. S. Civil Service Commission and the Library of Congress.

Here in Washington . . . and throughout the country at fourteen regional offices . . . the four thousand people of the United States Civil Service Commission direct the wide-reaching programs connected with operating the world's largest personnel office. Merit is their guide . . . and hundreds of thousands of the workers who fill our government's offices have demonstrated their fitness for Public Service by the measuring stick of Examination. Worth is their criterion . . . and all of their efforts are directed toward selecting for government position the best qualified people who can be found. And the fairest method for a Democracy to find the men and women who staff its offices is through objective examination . . . placing acceptance solely on demonstrated ability. Our government is thus assured of a highly efficient and conscientious corps of employees to carry on its exacting work. The Home of the Civil Service Commission is just across the street from The Hecht Company . . . at F Street and Seventh . . . and we have been good neighbors for many years. It is, therefore, a double pleasure to dedicate this salute to our thousands of friends who work there . . . and whose long tradition of public service has given our country one of the finest corps of employees in the world.
